This is to certify that I am well acquainted with fifty years of age, for many years a resident of this city, who has been at times extremely could not tell from what cause, unless it worms. He told his attending physician his but the physician at once ridiculed and refused to attend him any longer then mentioned Dr C McLane's Vermifuge and asked him if he would take it. He I must take something to get relief.

at once procured a bottle of Dr C McLane's Vermifuge and he took one dose. The he passed upwards of three quarters of in every form. He got up immediately, and is now enjoying excellent health; like the good Samaritan of old, is endeavoring to hunt up and select all cases among his unfortunate neighbors. He makes that may be given over by regular and induces them to try Dr C McLane's Vermifuge. So far he has induced more twenty persons to take the Vermifuge, and every case with the most happy results. He satisfied that Dr C McLane's Vermifuge, by Fleming Bros., of Pittsburgh is far to any other known remedy, and that if generally known would not fail to save valuable lives. Last Day of the Labor Conference at Chicago.

A MYSTERY OF CASTLE GARDEN

Reappearance of the Red Sunsets—The New York "Tribune" on the Low Price of Wheat —General News Items

CHICAGO, October 10—The federation of trades and labor unions continued the discussion this morning of various planks in their declaration of principles, without arriving at any result. Certain of the delegates endeavored to introduce matters affecting national politics, but were generally thwarted. The following resolution was adopted

WHEREAS, Many of the evils complained of by wageworkers cannot be removed unless by legislative enactment,

Resolved, That we deem it the duty of every trade unionist and wageworker in North America to work for candidates for legislative honors who have proved themselves true to the friends of organized labor

Delegates then went into secret session, to consider the allegation made by one of the delegates in a published interview, that an attempt was being made to have the federation declare for one of the national political parties

When the doors were reopened it was announced that all misunderstandings had been cleared away and harmony restored. At the afternoon session consideration of the platform was resumed and the revenue system of the federation remodeled. It was decided that the dues of unions having 1000 members or under be $10 per annum; local, state and trades assemblies, exceeding 1000 in membership, $25

It was decided that any trade organization having seceded from a kindred body be not allowed representation in the federation. It was decided to provide for a committee to supervise strikes, subject first to the approval of two-thirds of the members of every union represented in the federation

A resolution passed demanding that congress declare all unearned land grants forfeited. Also a resolution censuring the supreme court of New York for declaring the tenement house cigar bill unconstitutional

The election of officers resulted, President, W W McClelland of New York, secretary, Gabriel Edmondston of Washington, vice presidents, Joseph W Smith of Springfield, Illinois, Richard Powers of Chicago, J O. Sullivan of Philadelphia, Fred Blend of Evansville, Indiana W B Ogden of Cincinnati, and Joseph Bernard of Milwaukee, treasurer, Robert Howard of Fall River, Massachusetts.

Adjourned, to meet in Washington the second Tuesday in December, 1885

WHAT A CASTLE GARDEN BOX CONTAINED

NEW YORK, Oct. 10—[Special.]—Six weeks ago there landed at Castle Garden a man who told the officials that he was a member of the Irish constabulary, and had come out to track down some members of a secret association, who had not only attempted to murder him but had planned the destruction of buildings and the assassination of eminent personages in Great Britain. He left a large box in the baggage room, which he said he would call for at an early day. From that time he has not been seen or heard from. Yesterday afternoon the box was opened and found to contain the drawings of buildings in England and Ireland, with models of infernal machines appended, and dotted spaces indicating where the machines could be used to the most advantage. One drawing contains a design of a constable's house, and a document detailing a plan to blow up him and his family. There are besides models of dynamite machines, with notes explaining how to use them, and lists of suspects. The superintendent said the documents and plans in the box were of such a character that the government might desire to get possession of them first, as there was a likelihood the owner had been put out of the way here. In the superintendent's opinion a published description of what was in the box could defeat the ends of justice. That such important documents had not been claimed by the owner he believed, was a strong indication that he had been foully dealt with

THE RED SUNSETS AGAIN

NEW YORK, Oct 10—[Special.]—The Sun says "The fiery appearance of the western sky after sundown, which excited much attention and wonderment in all quarters of the world last year, has recently again become a conspicuous phenomenon. Last evening in particular the skies glowed with splendid shades of red and crimson. So brilliant was the display that the persons thought a great fire was raging. Long after the sun disappeared a lurid red light hung over the western horizon while the darkening heavens overhead reflected a faint tinge of pink. Similar displays have been witnessed at intervals, ever since last winter. Also the halo which can be seen surrounding the sun on any clear day and which has not lost any of its intensity, during the twelve months that have elapsed since it was first noticed

THE PETROLEUM TRADE

NEW YORK, Oct. 9—[Special.]—The Journal of Commerce says S. I. Strong, chairman of the executive committee of the New York petroleum exchange and member of the stock board, said yesterday that the continued dullness in oil was due to uncertainty as to the future production of wells in Butler county, Penn. The Phillips well in that locality, the most remarkable well ever discovered in Pennsylvania, flowing 100 barrels an hour since the first of September, making a total production of something less than 100,000 barrels, has probably drained the whole district, as the Johnson well, 900 feet distant from the Phillips well, has to-day been abandoned

ARTHUR HOLDS A CONSULTATION

NEW YORK, Oct. 10—President Arthur was in consultation until 1 o'clock this morning with John J O'Brien, Bernard Biglin, Robert G. McCord, Dewitt C Wheeler, Wm Doane, U. S. District Attorney Elihu Root, Police Commissioner Stephen B French and Cornelius N Bliss. Among the visitors this morning were Stephen B Elkins, Morton W Michael, Schuyler Crosby, F Q Quintard and Attorney General Brewster. The president held a long consultation with Brewster. The subject discussed, it is said, was tendering of the secretaryship to Cornelius N Bliss of this city

PROBABLY A CRUEL HOAX

NEW YORK, Oct. 10—[Special.]—Some commotion has been caused among striking stone cutters here, by an advertisement in the last Glasgow papers, received here, as follows "Wanted—Three thousand men to work on free stone in New York city. Good pay guaranteed. Eight hours labor. Come at once. Apply at Castle Garden or any yard in the city. By order of Master Stone Cutter." Inquiry at the rooms of the association failed to elicit any information about the advertisement. The Stone Cutters' Union have appointed a committee to investigate the matter

STRIKES AT PITTSBURG

PITTSBURG, Oct. 10—D W C Carroll & Co's boiler works have ordered a 10 per cent reduction of the wages of skilled employes, to take effect next Monday. The men will accept the reduction

PITTSBURG, Oct 10—The 10 per cent. reduction ordered by Delworth, Porter & Co, spike manufacturers, has been withdrawn and employes continue at old wages

PITTSBURG, Oct 10—The iron mills of Oliver Bros & Phillips resumed this morning at old wages

BIG PURCHASE OF LAND

NEW YORK, Oct. 10—[Special.]—A special from Buffalo says: Taylor & Crane and Jones & Brother a short time since, closed the purchase of 10,000 acres of land in Breathitt county, Kentucky. The price paid was over $1,000,000. The land is in the richest mineral section of the state

DROUGHT IN NORTH CAROLINA

RALEIGH N C, Oct 10—[Special.]—Rivers and creeks are lower than for many years, and in several cities the use of water has been restricted by the mayors to actual necessities. The damage to tobacco and other crops will be large. It has not rained for ninety days

NORTHERN CAPITAL IN NORTH CAROLINA.

RALEIGH, N C., Oct. 10.—[Special.]—Several persons representing a syndicate of northern men are here. One man to-day purchased, for a piano manufacturer, half a million feet of black walnut lumber. Another secured two mica mines for some men, New York, investors, while the sale of three gold mines is reported by agents from Davie, Buncombe and Mitchell counties. Cyrus W Field is at the head of the syndicate which purchased one

KEELY'S INVENTIONS

NEW YORK, Oct. 9—[Special.]—The Scientific American this week has an account of the recent trial at Sandy Hook of Keely's so-called etheric force gun. The writer says it was a clumsy air gun. Keely's cylinder was charged with compressed air

DRY WEATHER AT NEW YORK

NEW YORK, Oct. 10—[Special.]—The weather is slightly cooler, but there are no signs of rain. The country is suffering much for lack of water

TO-DAY'S WEATHER

WASHINGTON, Oct 10—North Pacific coast, local rains and partly cloudy weather. Middle and south Pacific, fair weather

THE MARKETS

THE LOW PRICE OF WHEAT

NEW YORK, Oct. 10—[Special.]—The Tribune's editorial says "A recent dispatch from San Francisco states that the price of wheat here is now lower than at any time since California came into the Union. This fact should not discourage California producers, however, for the phenomenal cheapness of wheat is not peculiar to that state or this country. The official average price of wheat in England for the week ending September 13 was only 34s per quarter, or $1 02 per bushel. To appreciate this ridiculously low price for that country, we must notice that the yearly average has never been as low as $1 20 per bushel since 1757. It was $1 09½ that year, but has not been as low in any previous year since 1780, and even then the average price for the year was $1 08. To all appearances the English average for July, August and September, must have been about $1 08, a yearly average not touched for over 100 years. Commenting on the low prices, the London Economist said "The chief reason of this is that means of communication with those countries beyond Europe where wheat can be cheaply grown, are so vastly increased and so much less costly than they used to be."

The Tribune adds "The cheapening of transportation from India can hardly be reckoned as the cause of the present low prices in the English or the American markets. Recent statements are that the average freight charge from the interior of India to ports of shipment, and thence to Liverpool, are about 15¼ cents per bushel of sixty pounds. When allowance is also made for the cost of handling in India and at the ports, it will be seen that, at the rates of freight from Chicago to Liverpool, the American farmer has an advantage of 30 cents per bushel, or more."

FAILURES

TEMPORARILY SUSPENDED

PETERSBURG, Va., Oct 10—The tobacco factory of Wilson & McGill, one of the largest in the city, has temporarily suspended operations. The firm employs over 300 colored operatives. The suspension is due to the scarcity of tobacco for manufacturing purposes, which retards the work more or less of other factories in this place

FAILURES FOR THE WEEK

NEW YORK, Oct. 10—Failures for the last seven days in the United States are 190. Canada 24. Failures are below average in the western, New England and Pacific states, but a corresponding increase is noted in the southern and middle states and in New York city

THE FIRE RECORD.

VALUABLE CHURCH BURNED

CHICAGO, Oct 10—The Third Presbyterian church on Ashland avenue, one of the finest church edifices in the city, was burned this forenoon. The structure was valued at $100,000. The loss is full, $75,000. Fully insured.

FROM WASHINGTON.

Report of the Commissioner of the General Land Office.

SOME INTERESTING STATISTICS

Crop Returns for the Month of October—Chief Nimmo's Annual Report Showing the Resources of the United States

WASHINGTON, Oct. 10—The commissioner of the general land office has submitted a report of the operations of the fiscal year ended June 30, 1884. Sales, entries and selections of public land embraced 26,834,041 acres, Indian lands, 697,129 acres, total, 27,531,170 acres, an increase over the year 1883 of 8,10 ,137 acres, and over 1882 of 13,222,003 acres. Receipts from disposals of public lands, $11,840,993, from Indian lands, $938,137, total, $12,779,130, an increase over 1883 of $1,073,304, and an increase over 1882 of $4,3 2,750, to which is to be added $10,275 received for certified copies of records, making the total receipts of the year $12 789,405

The commissioner renews his recommendation that the pre-emption laws be repealed, and that the homestead laws be amended so as to require proof of actual residence and improvement for two years, before homestead entry may be commuted to cash payment. He recommends the repeal of the timber-culture act, the act providing that lands covered by relinquishments shall be subject to entry immediately upon cancellation at the land office, the desert land law and the timber and stone land act

There were 107 miles of railroad constructed during the year under various land grants

The commissioner suggests that a commissioner be appointed to examine and decide upon unsettled private land claims in New Mexico, Colorado and Arizona, and recommends the reestablishment of the boundary line between Colorado and Utah, and a survey of the boundary line between Dakota and Montana, and the Yellowstone park

ILLEGAL FENCING, ETC

Thirty two cases of illegal fencing of public lands have been reported, the area enclosed aggregating 4,431,980 acres. Twelve cases have been acted upon, and suits recommended to compel the removal of fences. A very large number of complaints remain uninvestigated, for want of facilities.

The commissioner says that the portion of public lands still remaining should be economized for the use of actual settlers only. An act reserving public lands, except mineral and timber reserves for entry under the homestead law, with amendments to prevent evasion of its wise restrictions, would be a measure meeting this end

In conclusion, the commissioner points out the necessity for the immediate adoption of some measure by which natural forests may be preserved at the headwaters of important rivers and their tributaries, and in such other situations where their preservation is expedient for climatic effect, and other reasons of utility. He says there is no good reason why lands worth from $25 to $ 00 per acre for timber should be sold for $1 25 and $2 50 per acre, as at present, and he favors the withdrawal from sale or entry under the existing laws of all distinctively timber lands in the United States, until examination and appraisement can be made. After examination permanent timber reserves should be established where deemed desirable, and provision made for the sale, at not less than the appraised value, of the remainder.

AN INTERESTING SHOWING.

Annual Report of the Chief of the Bureau of Statistics

WASHINGTON, Oct. 10—The matter of chief importance treated of in the annual report of Mr Nimmo, chief of the bureau of statistics, is the enormous magnitude of our internal commerce. It is shown that the value of the products of the various industries of the United States is seven times the total value of our foreign commerce, nearly three times the total value of the foreign commerce of Great Britain and Ireland, and five times the total value of the foreign commerce of France, including in each case both imports and exports. The total value of products of industries in the United States is also shown to be a little more than twice the total value of exports of merchandise from all the countries of Europe. The United States is now the largest manufacturing country on the globe. The value of products of American manufacture consumed at home is five times the value of the manufactured products of Great Britain and Ireland, exported to all other countries, and more than fourteen times the value of exports of manufactured products from France to all other countries.

The relative value of internal as compared with the foreign commerce of this country is also illustrated by statements showing that 99 per cent of the coal mined in this country, 95 per cent of our iron and steel products, 95 per cent of the products of our leather industry, more than 99 per cent of our manufactures of wool 95 per cent of the product of cotton manufactures, and 97 per cent of our manufactures of glassware, earthenware and stoneware, are consumed in the United States.

The report shows that the total value of exports of merchandise from, and imports of merchandise into, California, Oregon and Washington territory, for the year ended June 30, 1884, was $82, 40,81 the value of exports was $46, 86, 4, and imports $37 17 89

CROP RETURNS.

Condition of the Various Products for the Month of October

WASHINGTON, Oct 10—October returns for corn show an average higher condition than in the past five years, but not so high as in any of the remarkable corn years from 1875 to 1879, inclusive. The general average is 93, which is very nearly an average of any series of ten years, and the indications are about 25 bushels per acre. The cultivated area approximating 70,000,000 acres, in the region between the Mississippi and the Rocky mountain slope, again presents the highest figures, which in every state rise a little above the nominal standard of a full condition. No state east of the Mississippi river returns a condition as high as 100. The lowest figures are as follows: West Virginia 73, Ohio 74, Louisiana 71, Texas 80, South Carolina 83. The reduction was caused by drouth. There is complaint of drouth in the Ohio valley and the Atlantic and Gulf states, but not sufficiently severe to reduce the yield. Early planted is everywhere matured. Late planting in southern states suffered for want of summer rains, and will be light and not well filled. Very little injury has been done by frosts. There was frost in Vermont on the 25th of August, and in several border states about the middle of September, with slight injury to late corn. The damage by chinch bugs and other insects has been slight

WHEAT AND OTHER PRODUCTS

The wheat crop will exceed that of last year by about 100,000,000 bushels

Threshing is slow and late, with results thus far confirming the indications of former reports. The yield per acre will average about 13½ bushels. The quality of the present wheat crop is generally good, especially in the eastern and middle states, and the western slopes of the Alleghenies, and in Michigan, Wisconsin and Minnesota. Some depreciation in quality is noted in Indiana, Illinois, Iowa, Missouri and Kansas. The average for the entire breadth is 96.

The indicated yield of rye is about twelve bushels per acre, and the quality superior

The yield of oats is a little above the average, yielding about twenty-seven bushels per acre and making a crop approximating 570,000,000 bushels of good quality

The Barley crop makes a yield of nearly twenty-three bushels per acre and a product exceeding 50,000,000

The average quality and condition of buckwheat averages 87, indicating a crop slightly under the average condition

The potato crop is represented by 88, five points lower than in October of last year, two points lower than in 1879, and 1882, and the same as in 1880

October returns for cotton indicate a reduction of nearly eight points in the average condition from 1884, as the result of continued drought, in arresting development and destroying the vitality of plants

The prospect for the hop crop is reduced to the minimum. The drought has been general, and its effect manifest in every state. Of ten successive crops only two have averaged a lower condition in October. These were in 188 and 188 , when the averages were 66 and 68 respectively. The average was 58 in the great crop of 1882.

WASHINGTON NOTES

WASHINGTON, Oct 10—The president has recognized Henry Davidson Walker as British consular agent for Eureka, Arcata and Hoo ton, California, and Phillip Labodie consul to the United States from Mexico at Albuquerque, New Mexico

The Canadian postoffice department will take part in the exhibit and postal appliances at the New Orleans exposition

FOREIGN DISPATCHES.

FRANCE

REINFORCEMENTS FOR TONQUIN URGED

PARIS, Oct 10—La Liberte urges upon the government the necessity of sending reinforcements to Tonquin, stating that notwithstanding the victories of the French forces there they are suffering a daily reduction in numbers, while the Chinese losses can be indefinitely replaced in China, where life is held cheap. Defeat must otherwise prevail, and it is evident that a large and costly French army must be dispatched to Tonquin, to save the remnant of the French forces there, unless it is too late

PURSUING THE CHINESE

PARIS, Oct 10—A dispatch from Gen. Briere de Lisle, under date of the 8th, says "Gen Negrier is pursuing the Chinese toward the village of Yent .e. I have ordered that Ke , the town where Gen Negrier had an engagement with the Chinese, be strongly occupied, and the Loo Chuan river, and other outlets, be closed. In western and southern Tonquin Chinese bands have been driven off and their chief killed "

NO DEATHS AT MARSEILLES

MARSEILLES, Oct. 10—Ravages of cholera in this city are nearly over. There were no deaths to-day

ENGLAND.

THE POLITICAL SITUATION

LONDON, Oct. 10.—The prospect of a compromise of the franchise bill being reached between the conservatives and liberals is improving

The Marquis of Salisbury, the conservative colleague of the Duke of Richmond, and Earl Cairns are holding a conference at Gordon castle, the residence of the Duke of Richmond, looking to a settlement of the difficulty with the liberals

CENSORSHIP CREATED

LONDON, Oct. 10—Instructions have been forwarded to General Wolseley to have the intelligence bureau of Egypt supervise all telegraphic dispatches of correspondents of newspapers. The general is given full power of censorship.

THE GOSSIPS AT YORK

LONDON, Oct 10—The report is current in court circles that the duchess of Albany, at the termination of her term of mourning, will marry the crown prince of Wurtemburg

CANADA

THE LIQUOR PARTY CRUSHED.

TORONTO, Oct, 10—The liquor party here is completely crushed by signal defeats yesterday in Stanstead and Simcoe counties. The feeling is growing here that if the Scott act were submitted here it would be carried by a large majority.

A DIVINITY STUDENT IN TROUBLE

TORONTO, Oct. 10—B. Osterhout, a divinity student in Victoria college, Cobourg, has been arrested on a charge of stealing a $1000 Canadian Pacific bond from Alloway & Champion's private banking office, Winnipeg, while there a short time ago, purchasing land for his brother

GERMANY.

BISMARCK'S LATEST PROJECT

BERLIN, Oct 10. Bismarck has prepared a project to be laid before the reichstag at the coming session, for the purchase by the empire of all railways now owned by the different federal governments, and centralizing the administration thereof in Berlin. It is stated that the governments of Bavaria, Wurtemberg and Saxony oppose this scheme of consolidation of railway power. It is also stated that if their opposition continues Bismarck will sell the Prussian railways to the German empire and threatens to crush other railways by competition

BIG FIRE IN PERU

PAYTA, Peru, via Galveston, Oct 10—Fire here last night destroyed a quarter of the town. It started at 9 o'clock and ended at 4 this morning. The flames, fanned by a strong south wind, consumed everything in a straight line from where they started down to the beach. The fire was prevented from spreading west of the open square. Several houses were blown up. The cathedral bell sounded the alarm, but the fire engine of the town proved useless. Damage, $260,000. No insurance

AN EXPLANATION

CORVALLIS, Oct 10—Referring to the expected arrival at Portland of the steamer Yaquina, with rails for the Oregon Pacific railroad yesterday's OREGONIAN states that the "explanation given for this roundabout shipping is that the steamer cannot enter the bay." The "explanation" is ungenerous, and, in a journal so widely read as THE OREGONIAN, does injustice to Yaquina bay. The facts are that the steamer entered Yaquina bay, as usual, without difficulty, and, after discharging 400 tons and a lot of miscellaneous railroad material and merchandise, was dispatched by her owners to Portland, arrangements having previously been made by them for commencing track-laying from Corvallis westward. With equal precision THE OREGONIAN might now "explain" that the steamer Yaquina put in at Yaquina bay and lightered before attempting to cross the Columbia river bar

BUTLER SPEAKS AT PITTSBURG

Press Comment on the Democratic Meetings in New York—Interesting Extracts from New York Papers—Notes

CHILLICOTHE, Ohio, October 10—Mr Blaine left Columbus by a special train on the Scioto Valley road at 10 o'clock this morning. Ex Governor Foster joined the party. The first stop was at Circleville, where there was a large gathering in front of the courthouse. Mr Blaine was received in an enthusiastic manner. He spoke as follows

"If, to be observed by an entire continent be a source of pride, the people of Ohio should be very proud to-day because the eyes of every state in the union are upon them. The action of the people of Ohio on Tuesday next is awaited with deep solicitude throughout the length and breadth of this nation. Ohio is not the only state that votes in October, yet the average degree of republican zeal in the country is to be tested by your vote, and your vote will be taken as an index to the vote of November. My only mission, therefore is to urge upon you the importance of your action on Tuesday next, and to ask you if you are ready for it. (Cries of 'Yes! Yes! Ready! Ready!' and cheers.) For the first time in forty years, for the first time since 1844, when Mr Clay and Mr Polk were the nominees of the great parties, tariff or protection becomes from the very first day of the campaign a subject for popular discussion. That discussion is well nigh closed, and the question is to be submitted to the jury of eight hundred thousand voters in your state. That jury may decide the fate of protective tariff in this country for generations. It is too late now to go into an elaboration of the argument. Action is the word now. Action is your duty. I refrain, therefore, from doing more than to remind you that in all political elections of the past, unless the great crisis of 1863 and 1864 be excepted, never has more weighty or more far reaching responsibility devolved on the people of Ohio than that which they will meet on Tuesday next and meeting which I hope and believe they will fully and faithfully discharge." Great cheering

AT CHILLICOTHE.

PORTSMOUTH, O, Oct. 10—The reception at Chillicothe was elaborate and artistic. The approach to the stand was through an avenue between parallel lines of uniformed horsemen. At the upper end of this avenue were two rows of girls, dressed in white representing the states of the Union, and holding up a series of green arches, beneath which Blaine passed. Upon the stand were three smaller girls, representing Maine, Vermont and Ohio. Chillicothe was settled by Virginians, and indications of the origin of the town were seen in the unusual number of horsemen and negroes taking part in the procession

General Samuel H Hurst made a brief and an exceptionally good introductory speech, and the people received Blaine with every demonstration of enthusiasm. When he got an opportunity to speak he said

"From my school days I have been familiar with the Scioto valley and have heard much of the rich lands of Paint creek. [Laughter and cheers.] I am glad to see their inhabitants before me. I am glad to see before me this great representation of the agricultural portion of Ohio. I am glad to recall to their minds this morning the duty which the nation expects of them on Tuesday next. Your chairman has been pleased to refer to six great contests in which the republican party has been victorious. In the first presidential contest in which the republican party was engaged it was the vote of Ohio that gave strength to the legions that followed the gallant young Fremont. It was the vote of Ohio, in October, 1860, that, in a large part, secured Mr Lincoln's election. It was the vote of Ohio, in October 1864, that secured a fresh victory to loyalty and to the union on the roar of the civil war. It was the vote of Ohio, in October, 1868, that rewarded the great hero of the war with the presidency, and repeated in 1872 and it was the vote of October, 1876, and October, 1880, that elevated two Ohio statesmen to the presidential chair. [Applause.] It remains to be seen whether the great legions of republicanism whether the great clans that have gathered upon the plains and in the valleys of Ohio, shall now be worsted in the encounter of Tuesday next ["No! no, no!"] whether in this seventh conflict for the great principles of a great party, you will maintain your splendid record of twenty-eight years. We will and cheers.] It is too late for argument that has been exhausted. It is too late even for appeal that has been addressed to you. There now remains only your own sense of duty and your own loyal determination. I thank you for this kind greeting and commend you with all your energies to the duty of Tuesday next." [Prolonged cheering.]

At 11 o'clock the train started for Portsmouth

AT PORTSMOUTH AND IRONTON.

IRONTON, O., Oct 10—At Portsmouth there was a tremendous demonstration. There were full 20,000 people in the streets and around the stand where Blaine was introduced. He made a brief speech presenting the protective tariff as the great issue, and urging the importance of the October vote in Ohio as bearing upon that question, and upon the presidential contest. The crowd was so great and so enthusiastic that it proved difficult to get Blaine back to his carriage

It was after dark when the train arrived at Ironton. Later he was driven to a large stand, from which he reviewed a torch-light procession. After the procession the people called for a speech, and Blaine in response, spoke at some length, in the same vein as at the other places to-day, of the importance of the tariff issue, the responsibility of the republicans of Ohio, as having the lead in determining the result of the pending contest between the parties. In the procession there was a young republican club from Ashland, Kentucky, and another from Huntington, West Virginia. Alluding to these Blaine said "I am pleased to note that in this vast assemblage you have representatives from the opposite shore of the Ohio, and that Kentuckians and West Virginians are coming in and co-operating with the people of Ohio, for a common cause and to a common end. (Cheers.) Kentucky is taking on new life, and when the days of democratic free trade are ended in her councils she will stand, as she is entitled to stand, in enterprise and in progress, alongside of her sister state Ohio." (Great cheering.)

THE RIVAL OHIO SHOW

Leading Lights in the Democracy Address the People of Cincinnati.

CINCINNATI, Oct. 10—Ex-Senator Hendricks reached here to-day, and was driven to the hotel without any parade or ceremony. In the afternoon he took a drive through the suburbs, and received calls, but made no address. Senator Bayard, Judge Thurman and General Rosecrans are also in the city, to attend the meeting to-night

Senator Bayard visited the chamber of commerce, and made a brief speech, to the effect that he had found in public life great help from the business education he received when a youth

At night all these gentlemen were driven to Music hall, and found it almost impossible to enter, so great was the crowd. Ex-Governor Hendricks made his way through the crowd to the stage, and appeared at the speaker's desk, when the entire mass of people rose to their feet and cheered again and again, waved hats and handkerchiefs, and shouted for Cleveland and Hendricks. Similar demonstrations of less intensity marked the appearance of General Rosecrans, Senator Bayard, Judge Thurman and Senator Pendleton.

A SPEECH BY HENDRICKS

M. F. Ingalls called the meeting to order, and Senator Pendleton, as chairman, introduced ex-Governor Hendricks, who after a repetition of the demonstration made when he entered the hall, began his speech by saying "The election of next Tuesday is of great importance, not on account of the offices to be filled, but more especially because of the influence it will have on all the states at the November election." He, therefore, appealed to Ohio to give all proper consideration to this election. The election in November was not only for choice of men, but a decision of national policy. That decision would turn not only on the man presented, but on the policies and principles they represented.

He then proceeded to argue that there should be a change in the administration of the government, and gave, among the reasons, the concession in the republican platform that the tariff was laid unequally, and that more revenue was collected than was necessary for an economical administration of the government. If these faults were conceded by the party which has been in power nearly a quarter of a century, there should be a change so that a remedy could be applied. In proof of the admission by the republicans of existence of excessive revenue he cited President Arthur's message two years ago, when he called the attention of congress to the matter and suggested appropriate legislation. The revenue law was modified, but not sufficiently and now the excess of revenue above the requirements of economical administration was $85,000 000 annually. This sum was improperly kept from the business uses of the country and the government compelled to build expensive vaults for its storage. He asked if the republican party, under this condition of affairs, had a right to ask for continuance in office. [Cries of "No, no"]

FOUR YEARS AGO AND NOW

Four years ago, he said, times were fairly good. Fair prices were obtained for produce and fair wages for labor. Republican orators said, "Let well enough alone" and we were not able to answer that short but powerful argument. Do they say so now, when wheat is fifty cents a bushel lower than it was then, when men are everywhere seeking employment, and only finding reduced wages? When times are as hard as they are now the argument is, let there be a change that times may be better (cheers), and I think that argument ought to have great weight when the party in power keeps calling in from the people $85,000,000 more of taxes than is necessary

Turning to the question of what remedy the democrats proposed for this excessive taxation, he read the declarations of the platform to which the democratic nominees were pledged, and said, beyond question, they met the case. The banner of the democracy, thus inscribed, he said was placed in the hands of Grover Cleveland and Thomas A Hendricks. Here cheering for several minutes interrupted the speaker. When it ceased he added "and they were required to carry it before the public, and with it in their hands to either stand or fall." [Cheers.] That platform commands my approval, and I pledge fidelity to it in my official life

IN CONCLUSION

Continuing his argument for a change, he said it might be better but it could not be worse. ["You may be counted out."] "Gentlemen," said Mr Hendricks, "there is no danger of that. All the men in this country are honest, and the republicans are most tired of that business."

He then, in a facetious manner, read the demands of the republican platform for a restoration of the navy and for the destruction of polygamy, and said that he too wanted a navy strong enough that no foreign power shall dare to place American citizens in the jails of Ireland without cause, whether their names be McSweeney or anything else

Referring to the German defection in Ohio, he said the republicans are trying to make up for it by getting the Irish vote. This he regards as proof of desperation, and doubted the likelihood of the Irish voting with the republicans, for a man who, as secretary of state, allowed McSweeney, an American citizen, to lie in a foreign jail without charge or trial.

After ridiculing the plank against polygamy in the republican platform, he closed by an appeal to the freemen of Ohio to regard the ballot as a thing too sacred to barter. If the voters determined there should be a pure ballot next Tuesday the democrats would win. If ballots were permitted to be bought and sold they would lose

Senator Bayard followed in a speech of considerable length, after which short addresses were made by Judge Thurman and General Rosecrans

BUTLER'S MOVEMENTS

He is Given a Great Demonstration, and Makes a Characteristic Speech.

OIL CITY, Pa, Oct 10—General Butler, on his way to Pittsburg, was met at the depot by a crowd of 2000 with a brass band and military salute. He arrived from Meadville at 1.30 this afternoon, and was driven to the base ball grounds, where an immense crowd awaited him. His arrival was the signal for great cheering and after order was restored he spoke for half an hour, arraigning the republican and democratic parties and assailing the Standard Oil Company. At 3.30 the train started for Pittsburg, amid the most enthusiastic applause

When the train reached Franklin 5000 people were gathered at the depot to meet him. General Butler was escorted to a platform in the public square where he spoke for fifteen minutes. In the course of his remarks he advised local greenbackers to fuse when practicable but to be careful whom they fused with. By doing this they could carry almost any district.

Long before 8 o'clock the streets in the vicinity of the Pennsylvania Bank building steps, from which the addresses were to be made, were crowded, and when General Butler arrived the multitude had grown to immense proportions and not less than 20,000 to 25,000 people were present. It was a remarkable meeting, and so far as numbers were concerned has never been excelled in this city

A CHARACTERISTIC SPEECH

Shortly before 9 o'clock Butler was introduced amid great enthusiasm and deafening cheers. When order was restored he began his address, and spoke for two hours

After thanking the assemblage for the demonstration he spoke of the great distress in this city and said the depression was caused by an unequal division between labor and capital. He went before the Chicago convention and asked them to put such a plank in the platform as would get an equal division for labor and capital but they wouldn't do it

At this point fireworks were exploded from the top of a bank building, evidently by persons not connected with the demonstration. Butler demanded that they be stopped. "You had enough fireworks here ten years ago," said he, "and if it is not stopped I will lead you to stop it. We have lights, we are in the public streets, free for everybody, and I will not allow any banker or capitalist to interfere with it."

Continuing, he said there was a difficulty behind the scenes which affects this city particularly. "You think" said he, "that the tariff is going to do everything, yet a southern oligarchy controls all the negro labor of the south, they have better iron in the mines of Georgia than here, and by laborers there working at half price they are enabled to get ahead of you. The negro works for half because he cannot protect himself. It took the war to free the slaves, a war the like of which was never known, and which filled the land with blood. Our cause is greater than that of the abolitionist. It is intended to free forty million workingmen. If it cannot be done by the ballot, as sure as God reigns and our cause is just, so shall he punish this land again by red handed war, by freeing the white race. I hope that may not come."

General Butler then arraigned the republican and democratic parties, and called on the voters to join the people's party and urged that they stand together and thus hold the balance of power, and form a new party

POLITICAL POINTS

THE DEMOCRATIC DEMONSTRATIONS AT NEW YORK

NEW YORK, Oct 10—[Special.]—The democratic meetings here yesterday and last evening were very successful in point of numbers.

The Times says of yesterday's democratic and independent meetings "One of the greatest demonstrations ever seen in New York swept through its streets yesterday, almost from noon till midnight. If our friends in the other states have not long ago dismissed all fears about New York we think yesterday's demonstrations in this city, added to the increasing republican defection in all parts of the state, will convince them that Blaine has no more chance of getting the electoral votes of New York than of Georgia."

The Sun says "The air in Union square last night was full of sky rockets, colored fire and exploding bombs, and the streets were crowded with people. The noise was immense, but the enthusiasm was purely of the Coney Island variety. In all the mechanical turmoil of the occasion, it was remarkable that from the multitudes of people who gazed at the pyrotechnics and torch lights, not a cheer was heard for Grover Cleveland.

The World says. "New York never in its history witnessed such an imposing and moment-one political meeting as was held in Wall street yesterday Twenty thousand people filled the great financial thoroughfare. Business men marched in compact columns to the place of meeting, and 30,000 Cleveland torch-bearers filed through Union square last night, in procession before 50,000 spectators."

The Star says "Busy men of Wall street laid aside their puts and calls, ledgers and stock lists, and listened yesterday afternoon to the persuasive eloquence of Dorsheimer, Sullivan, Solomon and other campaign orators. There is nothing the 'bulls' and 'bears' like better than to take a 'flyer' in politics, as the crowd that thronged the steps of the sub-treasury building yesterday showed. They take almost as deep an interest in the campaign as they would in a break in stocks, and are just about as impartial in one case as in the other."

THE "SUN'S" REPLIES TO A CALIFORNIAN

NEW YORK, Oct 10—Special —The Sun has an editorial headed "To Young Voters of California," in which it says "We have received an inquiry from a citizen of southwestern California, one of the most beautiful and prosperous portions of the United States, and from its interesting character and positive ideas we think proper to answer it publicly."

Then follows the letter stating that the writer is doing all he can, like many others in his locality, for Butler, for whom he will cast his first vote. "We do not wish, however, [illegible] Blaine [illegible] with the [illegible] Butler [illegible] the privilege of giving his votes, should he [illegible] enough for his own election, to any other candidate [illegible] chooses, and if so, do you think he would turn in favor of Blaine?"

The Sun replies "It is no part of Butler's design, as we understand it, to make any deals with opposing parties He is engaged in founding a new party, more democratic than the democrats, more truly conservative than the republicans, and at the same time the purpose of the Sun is something different from this We have by no means renounced the old democratic faith of Jefferson and Tilden. We still hold that faith as the wisest [illegible] philosophy yet evolved by the [illegible] defeat Cleveland, [illegible] at the expense of defeating a democrat, as Van Buren and Adams defeated the party in 1848. Our ideas differ radically from those of our correspondents But our motto is, Butler first, Blaine second, and Cleveland nowhere."

THE "SUN'S" OHIO SPECIAL

NEW YORK, Oct 10—Special —The Sun's Columbus special says "Since his arrival Blaine has had free and full conference with men in charge of the state canvass The result of this talk is very satisfactory to Blaine General Dudley said 'Without going into a special statement, it can be said generally that reports show, within a [illegible] the counties of Cuyahoga or Hamilton [illegible] consideration, that the republican ticket will have 10,000 majority, and it may have more.' This estimate of Dudley's compares with the best judgment of men who are watching the campaign most closely. [illegible] Blaine himself 20,000 stronger than the state ticket. Republicans are nervous, as the campaign has been one of the most exciting ever known in [illegible]. They hope for a [illegible] In private the democrats are not as confident as they were one week ago. Blaine will leave to-morrow [illegible] through the Hocking valley. [illegible]"

THE "POST'S" LAST [illegible]

NEW YORK, Oct 10—Special.—The Post this afternoon has [illegible] characteristic campaign [illegible] as follows "More Letters—Blaine's Correspondence with Joseph [illegible]—How he [illegible] his [illegible] Little Rock Bonds Sold [illegible] Commission [illegible] Per Cent—[illegible] Reserve [illegible] More Light as a [illegible]"

The Post continues [illegible] column of private correspondence [illegible] Blaine and [illegible] Little Rock bonds [illegible] interest [illegible] anxiety [illegible] editorial [illegible]

[illegible]

NEW YORK, Oct 10—Special.—Beecher [illegible] letter [illegible] this morning, wherein [illegible] your letter [illegible] published [illegible] statements [illegible] campaign [illegible] When the [illegible] campaign [illegible] language borders too near [illegible] hope you to understand that I have nothing to do with the truth [illegible] Joy [illegible] make [illegible] remarks [illegible] published? If he did not I have lied; if he did Joy has lied There is no middle ground Please accept this letter as the only retraction and apology I am prepared to make to you, to Joy, to Blaine and to the republican party.

BUTLER AT PITTSBURG

PITTSBURG, Oct 10—When the train rolled into Union depot at Pittsburg, there were fully 10,000 people with [illegible] to welcome Butler. The distinguished visitor and party were driven immediately to the Monongahela house where they took supper, after which they proceeded to the place of meeting on Liberty street, at the junction of Wood street and Sixth avenue.

MEETING OF GERMAN REPUBLICANS

NEW YORK, Oct 10—Special —There was a large meeting of German republicans last evening All of the old time well known, influential Germans were present and enthusiastic for Blaine, thus disposing of the well persisted in story that the Germans had bodily left the republican party.

HOW HARVARD STUDENTS STAND

NEW YORK, Oct 10—Special —A special from Boston of the [illegible] says A canvass of the students at Harvard university completed to-night, gives Blaine, 487 Cleveland [illegible], St John [illegible] no choice, [illegible]

THE UNION LEAGUE

Resolutions Endorsing Blaine and Logan Adopted, Amid Great Enthusiasm

NEW YORK, Oct 10 — Special —The long-awaited proceedings of the Union League club on national candidates were taken last evening. The committee previously appointed, reported as follows

Resolved That in the opinion of the Union League club of the city of New York the maintenance of the republican party in the possession of the executive power of this country for the next four years is of vital importance to the well being of the country and its peace, honor and prosperity

Resolved That the Union League club urge upon all its members a vigorous and persistent support of the republican candidates by every means and resource in their power from this day forward till the [illegible] of the election, to the end that the [illegible] of the country may place the great offices of president and vice president in the hands of the candidates of the republican party—James G. Blaine of Maine, and John A. Logan of Illinois

Resolved That the committee be continued with instructions [illegible] to their best ability the purposes [illegible] in the foregoing resolutions

THE OPPOSITION

Jackson S. Schultz rose to a point of order. He stated, in brief terms, that under the laws of the club the resolutions should be referred to a special committee to be reported upon at the next regular meeting of the club

Justice Noah Davis briefly replied to Schultz He contended that the resolutions were in the sense of new business and that they came within the scope of the authority given the committee

President William M Evarts decided against the point of order. Evarts' decision was received with applause Not a voice was raised to ask an appeal from the chair He then [illegible] proceeded to read the report which was [illegible] closing with the resolutions above given

The enthusiasm of the audience could be controlled no longer. The much talked of "battle" [illegible] evident that with the parliamentary order settled, there was no doubt as to the result of a vote upon the report During its reading every mention of the name of Blaine [illegible] provoked cheers and applause and every [illegible] of the character [illegible] the greatest enthusiasm [illegible] with delight

A [illegible]

When the [illegible] was put upon the [illegible] of the report [illegible] "ayes" [illegible] It was estimated that [illegible] present [illegible] Among them were [illegible] Schultz, Joseph Harper [illegible] George Jones.

Theodore Roosevelt was balloted for membership. He got thirty-five blackballs out of 401 ballots. The opposition came from Marshall, Erhardt, Rollins and other Arthur men Roosevelt was declared elected.

CRIME'S RECORD.

Terrible Tale of Murder and Mutilation in Indiana.

ONE OF THE FIENDS LYNCHED

An Angry Mob Seeking his Accomplices Wife Murder in New York—Frauds in the Cigar Trade—Etc

EVANSVILLE, Oct 10—A horrible crime has been brought to light at Troy, Indiana, by finding the headless body of a woman in a cistern on the farm of Peter Backer The body was nude and the head was found in a thicket 18 yards from the cistern. This was late Wednesday evening When the body was taken from the water it was yet warm, and blood gushed from the trunk. It was the body of a portly woman, weighing about 160 pounds about 40 years old A deep gash was cut below the shoulder blade, as with an ax, and there was a wound on the forehead, as if done with a blunt instrument.

The body was taken to Troy, where it was viewed by a large number of people, but not identified until Thursday, when it was recognized as the body of Mrs. Stilwell Hendershot, who resided on a farm fourteen miles back of Troy A neighbor of Hendershot, while in Tell City yesterday, saw the murdered woman's husband, and also noticed a valise, marked "T H Hendershot." While the steamer Droillard was at Troy last night a search warrant was procured and the valise opened and found to contain the clothing of the victim, covered with blood Warrants were made immediately for Stilwell Hendershot, the husband and T. H and Wm H Hendershot, sons of the old man [illegible] William was arrested and brought to Troy last night The oldest son refused to come and defied arrest An increased posse was sent after him and he was brought to Troy this morning and placed in jail He acknowledges committing the crime himself, and says his father and brother had nothing to do with it The old man's testimony seems to throw the weight of the crime on himself and the oldest son

The murder of Mrs. Hendershot arose from her refusal to sign away the farm to which she had a deed in fee simple, and which the father and son wanted to dispose of Several hundred people were present at the trial, and about noon an effort was made to seize the criminals and mete out summary vengeance on them, but the officers succeeded in averting the attack The result of the preliminary trial released William The other brother and father were remanded to jail

ONE OF THE MURDERERS LYNCHED

At 7 o'clock the mob at Troy took the eldest son out of jail and hanged him to a beam in the barn where the murder was committed He made a confession that his father shot his mother and that he cut her head off with an axe.

At [illegible] o'clock the mob passed through Tell City on the way to Cannelton, three miles above, to hang the father and other son, who are in jail there There is a mob of 200 strong

AN INDIANA HANGING

FORT WAYNE, Ind, Oct 10—Chas W Butler, one of the most noted criminals in the state of Ohio, son of Dr George Butler, a wealthy physician of Columbus, Ohio, was executed at Columbia City, Indiana, to-day, for the murder of Allie Butler, his young wife, at Decatur, Indiana, on September 20th, 1883. After the arrest of the murderer Butler was incarcerated in the jail at Columbia City to await his trial During his confinement in jail he succeeded in [illegible] his escape and was for some days at large, but was subsequently captured His [illegible] occupied nearly a month. All that wealth and influence could do was done to save him from the gallows but with no avail Up to [illegible] Butler preserved a most stoical indifference as to his fate, but when advices received straight from the supreme court, and the governor refusing to interfere in his behalf, he broke completely down and wept bitterly He then asked for [illegible] the priest [illegible] for spiritual consolation He walked calmly to the scaffold, where he made a [illegible] speech, declaring that those concerned in his conviction would be sorry for [illegible] His [illegible] aroused by [illegible] indignation

SHOT HIS WIFE

NEW YORK, Oct 10—Special —Patrick Hayes shot his wife yesterday on Grand street Following are the particulars Hayes kept a [illegible] the Bowery Norton, a young man, was his [illegible] Jealousy of Norton's attentions to his wife prompted him to shoot him Hayes gave himself up. He was held for trial at Norton, but the case never came to trial and he was out on bail yesterday, and met his wife coming from [illegible] Hayes walked up to and struck her [illegible] suddenly pulled a pistol, and shot her three times She grappled with him, to prevent his shooting again, and a policeman rushed up and seized Hayes with his club On the way to the station house he said "Officer, I wish you had struck me harder" He appeared overcome with sorrow His wife is dangerously wounded Hayes is well known in sporting circles.

FRAUD IN THE CIGAR TRADE

CHICAGO Oct. 9 Several days ago revenue officers seized 5,000 domestic cigars bearing import stamps in the store of Leo Mayer The proprietor was in Philadelphia, where he still is. [illegible] was arrested to-day Government officials assert that the cigars were made in New York and bear old import stamps, taken from boxes of imported cigars and with the import dates [illegible] and others substituted They do not know whether this work was done in New York or Chicago, but express the opinion that it has been quite extensively practiced and that other dealers will be implicated

AN EDITOR MURDERED

JACKSONVILLE, Fla, Oct 10—A dispatch from Cedar Keys to the Times-Union says The body of J A Buckner, editor of the Gulf Coast [illegible], at Tarpon Springs, was found in a [illegible] between Anclote and Tarpon Springs, on Tuesday Deceased had a difficulty with a woman who passed as his wife, and whipped her. On Sunday she fled with a negro, and Buckner followed in pursuit. They passed out of sight [illegible] a point, and the next seen of Buckner was on Tuesday, when his body was found, as above stated

A SUBTERRANEAN VAULT DISCOVERED

NEW HAVEN Conn, Oct 10—In demolishing an old building on the top of East Rock, workmen discovered several underground passages from [illegible] to 40 feet long, 15 feet high and [illegible] feet wide, which led to a subterranean vault Several counterfeit silver pieces and a broken die were found Milton J Stewart, the last occupant, disclaims any knowledge of the matter This place had an unsavory reputation Murder and various crimes have been committed there

Philadelphia Call (Rep) The reduction of the public debt for September is estimated at $13,18[illegible],000 The republican party is running this country

Minneapolis Tribune Mr Butler is almost as heartily abused by the democratic press as Mr Blaine It must be a great consolation to Mr Butler to know that he has not been a candidate altogether in vain

New York Post The republicans of New York state have for years shown an independent spirit which has distinguished them above their party associates in every other state in the Union

New Orleans Times-Democrat Good men love their country and want to see it happy. They [illegible] parties accordingly as they believe parties will bring about the results they have at heart

Philadelphia Press The contract Carl Schurz [illegible] at the beginning of the campaign has [illegible] He undertook to turn over to Mr Cleveland the solid vote of the Germans in the west Advices show, however, that the results of his [illegible] and speeches in that section are so small as to be hardly appreciable

[illegible] A [illegible] organ [illegible] says "Vermont [illegible] exceed [illegible] by $72,0[illegible] Vermont has been a republican state from way back." But had the organ wanted a nice round sum it would have figured upon the democratic debt of New York City, which is over $100,000,000—a little more than one-sixth of the entire municipal debt of the cities of the United States. Give a democrat rope and he is certain to hang himself.

RECEPTION TO REV. E W. CASWELL.

The New Pastor of Grace M. E. Church Publicly Welcomed.

Grace M. E. chapel was the scene last evening of a very pleasant gathering, the occasion being a public reception to the pastor. The decoration of the audience room and parlor, with flowers, ferns, ivy and autumn leaves, was a delight to the eye, revealing the presence in this society of ladies with artistic tastes The pastor's monogram was on the wall, Over the altar place were the words "Grace chapel," the letters covered with autumn leaves And also the motto "In the name of our God we set up our banners" The formal part of the exercises were presided over by Mr J K Gill, who opened the exercises with a few appropriate remarks After singing by the congregation and prayer by Rev Dr Himes Mr J. J Weston was introduced and with evident sincerity of feeling and well chosen phrases voiced the welcome of the church to their pastor Mr Caswell's response was listened to with marked attention He spoke in the most appreciative way of the manner of his reception privately and individually since his arrival, before this public welcome, not only by members of his church, but by the people generally, and he already felt at home He enthusiastically commented upon the generous, open-hearted spirit of the west, illustrating this by saying that in the east an itinerant is sometimes several months in a city before his brethren in the ministry are scarcely aware that he has arrived, but he had been in Portland only a few days when he was sought and cordially welcomed by eight of the pastors. He referred confidently and very hopefully to the future of Grace church Mr Caswell is a gentleman of pleasing and winning address, and gave the impression that great earnestness and fervor [illegible] would characterize his ministry After these exercises an hour was spent in social converse and introductions. The chapel has comfortable seating capacity for 300, is carpeted and neatly furnished, and the members and those present last evening were greatly pleased with it

OLYMPIA ITEMS.

OLYMPIA, Oct. 8

Since the middle of last August twenty-four bears and fifteen cougars are known to have been killed in this county

Although a third crop of strawberries are said to be in bloom in this locality, it is hardly likely they will find their way to the market this year, if the present weather continues

A man was arrested in this vicinity on Monday on suspicion of having been concerned in the murder of August Pickler in Lewis county on the 29th of August He was sent to Lewis county next day for identification

Tramps in this vicinity are exhibiting about as much cheek as a "government mule," by climbing through back windows of uninhabited houses at night, building fires, and making themselves generally comfortable People are advised to nail up their windows to prevent such intrusions

Mrs Mattie A Bridge delivered a fine temperance lecture on Sunday evening to an overflowing house and will appear on Thursday evening, taking for her subject "The Mysteries and Romances of Florida," which the Boston Post pronounces "a poem and picture with all the sweetness of Wordsworth and the humor of Hogarth"

Notwithstanding the weather indications telegraphed to THE OREGONIAN daily of "fair weather" on the Pacific coast, we are yet compelled to believe that the weather prophet labors under a delusion, or else he has got politics on the brain, as never within the memory of the oldest inhabitant has it rained harder or more steadily than during the past two days, far exceeding both in quantity and quality the famous Oregon mists that we read about.

A most cold-blooded murder took place in East Olympia on Monday last, the victim being an unfortunate tramp, who probably while laboring under a fit of either hunger or delirium tremens wended his way into strange premises on a foraging expedition Shortly afterwards a boy passing in the vicinity heard groans as of some one in distress, and on making a search he found the body of the unfortunate victim lying in a ditch weltering in blood, with no less than eighteen wounds in different parts of the body An alarm was given and the body removed, but all efforts to sustain life were without effect, and the unfortunate victim of an inordinate appetite soon breathed his last Thus ends the tale of a hog.

TRIBUTE TO HON T B ODENEAL

DEFAULTER LANG'S EXPLANATION.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 10 —[Special]—Isaac I Lang, defaulting secretary of the Chosen Friends, who attempted to commit suicide two weeks ago, is still alive, and there is some danger that he will die. To a reporter who asked him to-day what he had done with the money embezzled, he said that he kept no personal account, but that he had from time to time made loans ranging from $20 to $500 to friends, and that the money must have gone in that loose way This is an explanation, which he admitted looked a little unreasonable, but he declared it was the only explanation of the matter he could make He has lived always in a modest way, and has no expensive habits, so far as known

ONE PORTLANDER KNOCKS DOWN ANOTHER

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct 10 —[Special]—For some time past there has been ill-feeling between Frank Stechhan, the theatrical manager, and W W Knott, both residents of Portland, growing out of articles printed by Knott in a defunct eoming paper of Portland several months ago To-day they met on the street in this city, when Knott addressed Stechhan abusively. The latter squared off and knocked Knott down, and the latter picked himself up and discreetly walked off

POSITION OF IRISH-AMERICANS.

Plain Talk from an Irish-American.

PORTLAND, October 9, 1884.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE OREGONIAN

The question of how are the Irish-Americans going to vote in the coming presidential election is becoming one of deep interest to Irishmen, and of great anxiety to the leaders of the democratic and republican parties. Irishmen and Irish-Americans naturally take an interest in anything that tends to the elevation of their countrymen socially and politically. It is therefore our duty to closely watch the two parties and discuss their objects and where? The planks in their platform that are of particular interest to us should be well considered Also the general characters of the candidates for the presidency of this great republic

To do this with any information we must lay aside all partisanship, divest ourselves of sectarian rancor, and discuss the questions from a broad and liberal standpoint I believe that great good would result from such a course In enables us to discharge our duties better as American citizens and guard our people from being cajoled by dishonest and designing men who make politics their stock in trade and barter away the votes of their confiding countrymen, and whose highest ambition is to be a ward politician continually boasting of all the votes they have "solid" or, to put it plainer how many of their countrymen they own politically. As a race we love our native land, and our love and devotion to our adopted country cannot be questioned It is the desire of every Irishman and Irish-American to see this country exalted, the dignity of American citizenship elevated and the honor of our nation upheld at home and abroad. We are all proud of the name of American citizen. We fully realize its duties and responsibilities. We accept them with all their significance I am glad to see my countrymen are beginning to think for themselves In Ireland to-day the struggle they are making for their God given rights has arrested the attention and gained the admiration of the civilized world and knowing the justice of their cause, they will continue the struggle until every vestige of the power of that cruel and most rapacious government is driven from their soil —a government whose whole policy in Ireland has been to destroy our people, and to-day is exterminating our beloved fatherland to death.

I am glad the Irish-Americans are also beginning to think and act as independent men should do. There is a party in this country trying to advance English interests, and believe it their duty to oppose such wherever they find it England must be given to understand that wherever there is an Irishman she has in him an enemy until she acknowledges the justice of Ireland's claim to national independence. We should, as citizens of this great republic, demand of both parties that for the influence [illegible] English shall not be [illegible] that the dignity of citizenship be elevated, and protection of the citizen guaranteed whether native born or adopted, regardless of nationality. If we make this demand backed by our votes, no foreign government dare ask, with such disregard to the wish of congress, as in the case of citizen Patrick Hounel? the legislature would be introduce a resolution as Mr Hewitt did, and immediately afterwards wrote to the British minister for doing so. But we have been half as true to ourselves as we have been to the democratic party such things would be simply impossible Unfortunately we have always blindly followed that party When ever the "slate" was made up for us by one or two of the bosses at never failed of receiving our sanction to be followed without any vote of election day. Yet we brought the most to bear sad we would make the victims by voting any thing but the good old democratic ticket, thereby putting aside all other regardless of their honesty or ability. I think no one will dispute that such conduct deserves rebuke or not. Have we not felt it? Let the experience of every Irish American [illegible] what [illegible] the Union [illegible] answer. The democrats in all their [illegible] conventions or at primary meetings, have shown a greater disregard of the wishes of their faithful followers who were always to be counted on at the ticket and gave them spoils. I ask my countrymen and sincerely did you ever know democrats as a party, to give us equal representation? On all occasions when a citizen of Irish birth was a candidate for any important office, and it required the full vote of the party to elect him, was he not laughed at at the polls? [illegible] our representatives and in politics who have been elected to office Can they dare deny that it was by the votes of Irish Americans who in that particular district or locality could elect or reject any candidate? Such is the manner in which we have always seen our countrymen treated by the party we have followed for a long time—a party that has always controlled our votes, and acted as though they owned us so much merchandise, to be disposed of as they wished, thus placing us in a false position before the great majority of our fellow citizens.

But they have lost the grip on us and no amount of bulldozing can make us return to their to [illegible] again To bring my countrymen to this abject state of servitude to this party they have been more or less materially assisted by some of our own race, who, for place and emolument will barter industriously to mislead our people, and keep them political slaves to this party. The English in the same way in Ireland ever find men who, though Irish by birth are hiring for the same consideration to keep our people in that most degraded condition of willing slavery But the light is spreading among our people and is shining so bright that we wonder why we have been in the dark so long We see that the party we have been following in the dark is false to the true principles of democracy. It is no use calling us "turncoats." We cannot be frightened into going back The ship will have to be steered without us We now see that we would be unworthy the name of free men if we were not guided by our own convictions. The man is to be pitied who does not possess the moral courage to rise above all party affiliations and vote according to the dictates of conscience We are told the democrats have always been the friend of the foreigner, and in particular the Irishman, and for that reason we should vote for that party. I fail to see that the Irishman comes to this country depending on any party I have yet to meet the man that admits such dependent condition I think bone, muscle, brain and character are our only friends Being an Irishman by birth I am not vote to put a party into power that would adopt free trade, directly advancing English interests by making this country the market for English manufactures. If I did I would be false to the land of my birth, and false to my countrymen at home who are struggling manfully to break the chains that hold them in slavery to a power that has made us wanderers and aliens all over the world I believe a blow struck at England's commercial interests is a blow struck at her power. Weaken that power whenever we can and we strengthen the arm of our countrymen at home in their noble struggle for self-government

Froude, the English historian, said to the people of this country that if the Irish were in earnest they would be more practical—that we were nothing but "pot-house politicians" Let us show to the American people by our rejection of the English candidate for the presidency, Grover Cleveland, that we are practical when there is an opportunity, and that Froude lied when he so maliciously slandered us. As an American citizen, I believe I will be discharging my duty best by what is best for this republic, by voting for that able statesman and noble American, James G. Blaine, whose great ambition is to see his country exalted, the citizen protected at home and abroad, the friend to the working man and opposed to servile labor. He believes that American industries should be protected and thus secure the happiness and prosperity of his countrymen Irish-Americans who have devoted the best part of their lives to the regeneration of Ireland and who have been immured in British bastiles for years their rights of citizens ignored men who by their suffering for the cause are dear to all Irishmen, and Irish-Americans should be heard on this subject and what they say carefully considered. They are men who have endeared themselves to our people by their disinterested devotion to the cause of freedom and suffering humanity, and not by attending political conventions and making political speeches They have all pronounced for that noble champion of equal rights and propagator of true Americanism James G. Blaine I am glad to see that the Irish-Americans of this city are alive to the issues of the campaign, and have organized a Blaine and Logan league I do not believe that the gentlemen who compose it can be led to be [illegible] by one or two individuals. I know that such an assertion is in keeping with the old time [illegible] of the intelligence of the Irish-American citizen It is well to trust [illegible] when they cannot use us as heretofore they will [illegible] Time, the great unmasker, is the only remedy that can be prescribed to stop the [illegible] sufferings and hallucination that some of our democratic citizens in this place are laboring under, regarding the great uprising of the Irish-American citizens in all parts of the Union, and in particular the Blaine and Logan league of this city.

Particulars of the Good Fortune that Befell John [illegible]. Jacobs.

Something of his History his Marriage and his Life on the Pacific Coast How he Spent his First Advance

It now turns out that the fortune [illegible] John J Jacobs, who formerly kept the St [illegible] hotel in this city was not the princely amount of $5,000,000, as previously stated, but only to [illegible] [illegible] However, this is a great deal better than nothing. Jacobs was in San Francisco at the time this streak of luck befell him, and, according to his custom, he was [illegible] [illegible] other people know [illegible] He [illegible] this, and also something of the eccentric character's history, is well told by the San Francisco [illegible]

The [illegible] of the romancer [illegible] given the readers of literature strange [illegible] of fortune and ups and downs of human life but the old saying that "truth is stranger than fiction," [illegible] never received a stronger [illegible] in life than by the checkered career [illegible] sudden elevation from poverty to affluence [illegible] a man well known to nearly every business man of San Francisco [illegible] the past five or six years The stout, portly form of a gray-haired man known as Jacobs has been a familiar sight about the city. To lovers of chance he is especially well known, having followed as an [illegible] the peddling of lottery tickets This avocation was not one of the most profitable ones, judging from the frequent calls he made upon his many friends for small loans of [illegible] It was seldom that his quiet request was refused [illegible] to all those who pitied the story of his unfortunate career of speculation and losses was well known. [illegible] time between the sale of his lottery tickets and awaiting the result of the drawing [illegible] was generally [illegible] the sale of a few boxes of cigars which he sold [illegible]

A few days since the [illegible] was surprised by a visit from Mr Jacobs, and no doubt watched with interest the drawing of a small book from an inner pocket, the grave adjustment of spectacles, the scanning of the book, the slow drawing of a purse, and a silent laying before [illegible] the amount which they had loaned this [illegible] [illegible] years before They were [illegible] still upon the [illegible] to whom he had obtained the [illegible] [illegible] Mr Jacobs [illegible] had fallen to the immense amount of $[illegible] [illegible] England

The [illegible] of the new millionaire's [illegible] singular [illegible] abounding in those sudden changes and [illegible] incidents so dear to the [illegible] of [illegible] He was born in the year 18[illegible] in [illegible] where his family was very well known [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] thronged up [illegible] city of New Orleans [illegible] diamond [illegible] the business [illegible] [illegible] followed [illegible] His father, as both [illegible] [illegible] He was the [illegible]

[illegible] subject of this article became acquainted with Miss Mozoli? [illegible] [illegible] Powers [illegible] Shortly after this Mr Jacobs and his wife [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] He began [illegible] business [illegible] [illegible] and [illegible] the struggle for [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] Though he was [illegible] to be plucky made a strong effort, and [illegible] what [illegible] often compelled to seek his friends' [illegible] assistance. It appears from the fact that every item was placed in his book that it was always his intention to make good these loans. Business men will recollect his [illegible] and the request always made [illegible] "Mr J—, I am a little short. Could you advance me a trifle?" He was always neatly shaven and tastefully clad.

[illegible] Thursday he obtained the first information that he was no longer in poverty, but was [illegible] millions, through a letter from [illegible] England Inclosed in the letter was a draft [illegible] for the sum of [illegible] But the sudden good fortune [illegible] came too late to make him happy. The wife for whom he had struggled so hard having died two weeks before in his arms. From this blow he has not fully recovered. The first action taken by Mr Jacobs was to enter a well known jewelry store, the proprietor of which had often loaned him small amounts, and after paying the sum he last received, purchased a watch and chain and a diamond ring, valued at $400, paying cash He then proceeded about the city, repaying small sums, the entire total reaching over $[illegible] [illegible] from whom Mr Jacobs has received the legacy followed the business of a diamond merchant, and the entire [illegible] is said to be [illegible] He leaves for England in two weeks. He has already made a donation of $500 to [illegible] of the orphan asylums, and will no doubt present a gift to all of them

THE ALABAMA CLAIMS.

Final Distribution of the Twenty Million Dollar Award

ENGLAND'S AID TO THE SOUTH

Work of the Court of Commissioners—Pacific Coast Claimants—The History of this Remarkable Case

The proceedings of the court of commissioners of Alabama claims, now sitting in Washington, constitute the closing chapter in the history of one of the most remarkable cases of the settlement of differences between nations by international law and arbitration, instead of war, that the world has ever seen. The court is now distributing to the proper claimants about $9,500,000 which is the last of the money handed over to America by England twelve years ago, in consideration of the part John Bull [illegible] ridiculously took in assisting to destroy the property of sympathizers with the north during the late civil war in this country. Ever since England paid her gold to America as a penalty for her bad judgment and a bid for American clemency, the question of the disposition of the money has been brought prominently before the public from time to time in its general aspects. Several volumes have been written upon the subject, treating of it up to the completion of the labors of the first court of commissioners, which held its sessions during the years 1874-77, and distributed to claimants about half the whole award and accrued interest. The memorable affair is now approaching its final adjustment. A number of new and surprising features have arisen during the deliberations of the present court (which were begun June 5, 1882) and will be concluded December 31, 1885), and important rulings have been made recently. A sketch of the occurrences which brought this money to this land and the modus operandi which has placed it in the pockets of private citizens will be of general interest.

THE ORIGINAL AWARD

The amount paid by England in 1872 was $15,500, but interest has swelled it to nearly $20,000, of which the court created in 1874 disbursed $9,316,120, and the present court began its operations with $9,563,800 to dispose of, of course the expenses of the court being reserved from the fund in each instance. Fully one-eighth of the amount distributed by the former court came into the hands of citizens of the Pacific coast, and about the same proportion continues in the judgments of the tribunal now in session, which has apportioned nearly $2,000,000 already. Many of the claimants have their residence in San Francisco, and the work of preparing their claims and getting together the supporting evidence during the last two years has recalled afresh the thrilling scenes and incidents of war times. It has involved penetrating again minutely into the terrible events of 1861-65. A transcontinental railroad had not then been completed and the only means of communication between this coast and the Atlantic ports was by sea, around Cape Horn or by the Isthmus of Panama. The rebellion was in progress. The confederate vessels of war and privateers and their anomalous British abettors of a similar character were multiplying and busily engaged in the work of capturing, plundering and burning the merchant marine of America. All supplies to this coast and everything sent away of necessity were carried by ships, and whether a ship would arrive safely at its destination or become a prey of the enemy was a matter of chance.

ENGLISH AID TO THE REBELS

The confederate authorities in casting about for foreign succor, found ready sympathy in England—a feeling enlarged and intensified considerably by the fiery letters sent from the south to the great London dailies by George Augustus Sala. The Alabama was the first privateer, and did the most damage to American ships and ended her famous career by being sunk in the English channel by the Kearsarge in 1863. All the claims arising from losses through confederate privateers are classed under the name of this leader and chief instrument of destruction.

The marauding of the privateers was continued throughout the war. They left the shipping of this country a blow from which it has never recovered. Many of them were fitted out in English ports and partially or wholly manned by Englishmen. In some instances they would start away from a British port and afterwards another vessel would bring out their armament to them a few miles from shore. The intention of the English people in permitting and helping on such proceedings was undoubtedly to further the cause of the south, believing that it would be victorious. The most active privateers were the Alabama, the Florida, the Shenandoah, the Georgia, the Tacony, the Chickamauga, the Lapwing, the Tuscaloosa, the Clarence, the Nashville, the Olustee, the Sumpter, the Retribution, the Savannah, the Sallie, the St. Nicholas, the Winslow, the York, the Tallahassee, the Boston, the Echo, the Jeff Davis and the Calhoun. Some were steam and others sailing ships.

WORK OF THE PRIVATEERS

Their usual method was to capture the ship encountered, take any supplies or property they needed, burn or sink the vessel and land the members of the crew at some obscure place or send them off on a passing ship to some foreign country after rifling their pockets, etc. When possible to do so they prevailed upon the captured crew to join their side. In some cases captains were hung up by the thumbs as an argument in favor of announcing their [illegible] predilections and other ingenious cruelties were frequently meted out. These privateers went everywhere, looking for American vessels, but the principal scenes of their operations were [illegible] the coast of North and South America. They lay in wait in the passage of the West Indies for the treasure ships carrying bullion, which came from California to New York. For the federal government failed them by providing the ships with a convoy from Aspinwall. The most vicious and atrocious acts of all were committed by Captain Waddell of the Shenandoah on this coast up north, where, after he had read the San Francisco newspapers of April 1 [illegible] conveying to him the fact that peace had been declared, that Lee had surrendered and that Lincoln had been assassinated, he continued his depredations—on the [illegible] of June burning a fleet of ten whaling ships and then starting for England, where he delivered up his vessel to English authorities. The men in his command [illegible] afterward that they expected if caught on their passage home that they would be treated as pirates.

PROTESTS OF SECRETARY SEWARD

This privateering, made possible by the helping hand of England, was effected in opposition to the most strenuous protests of Secretary of State Seward, made through Charles Francis Adams, who was then American minister at the court of St. James. The [illegible] of [illegible] showing [illegible] England [illegible] which subsequent events proved [illegible] frequently referred to now among the [illegible] records at Washington. Every one remembers the ominous [illegible] northern people and in diplomatic circles during the first years after the close of the war at England's conduct, when the American [illegible] was in jeopardy. It [illegible] American [illegible] satisfaction and [illegible] England [illegible], and the result was that the [illegible] nation sent five commissioners to Washington to meet and arrange differences. These made the treaty of Washington, which provided for the establishment of an international court of arbitration at Geneva, Switzerland, to be composed of one representative from each of the following countries: England, the United States, Italy, Brazil and Switzerland. [illegible] this court settled the difficulties. It fined England $15,500,000 in 1872, which was paid unconditionally and with alacrity. The amount was meant to cover the value of property destroyed by privateers, but not to indemnify this country for the accompanying and inevitable losses to trade and commerce occasioned by the destruction of its ships as common carriers. Such losses would reach hundreds of millions.

DISTRIBUTION OF THE MONEY

In 1874 congress concluded to distribute the award among the people who had actually sustained the losses, and created the first court of commissioners of Alabama claims, which consisted of Presiding Justice Hezekiah G. Wells and Associate Justices Kenneth Raynor, William A. Porter, Caleb Baldwin and Harvey Jewell. The claims admissible before that court were limited to damages done by the Alabama, the Florida, and the Shenandoah subsequently to her departure from Melbourne, Australia, where she certainly was dressed up in fighting trim at a British port. It was supposed that these claims would consume the entire fund, but they did not, and when, in 1882, the government created the court now in session the remainder of the fund yet to be distributed was $9,500,000, as above stated. The present court consists of Presiding Justice Hezekiah G. Wells and Associate Justices James Harlan and Asa French, and its method of dealing with the cases is the same that was practiced by the first court. A [illegible] claim states his case in an attorney, who files a petition with the court [illegible] for judgment to the amount of the loss. [illegible] January, 1884, was the last day the petitions could be filed with the present court, and up to that date about 5000 claims had been presented, [illegible] of which came from this coast. The court has commissions in the various districts in which the testimony in the cases is taken. In each district the claimants has an attorney, as well as a chief attorney for the government in Washington. In the first and second court General John A. J. Creswell has occupied this position, and as a natural sequence of events the lawyers who figured prominently in the court of 1874 have met again in the present court. Those who have the majority of the cases from this coast in hand are Houghton & Stetson, Cornelius Cole & Son, Lloyd & Wood and Walter G. Holmes. Each case is tried separately in open court, and upon the evidence the award is made in full, in part, or denied.

ENGLISH CLAIMANTS

In the present court, losses sustained by men of English birth are admissible, whereas they were not in the first court, and many Englishmen are after the money that came from their queen. Claims for damages done by any privateer provided with letters of marque and reprisal from the confederate government are admissible before the present court, also insurance cases to recover that part of the premiums charged during the war in excess of the ordinary rate. Probably few awards greater than $100,000 will be made. The largest claim before the court was that of the Atlantic Insurance Company of New York for $1,500,000, which was rejected, and there are claims for as small a sum as $10. A batch of claims that would require the entire funds under the jurisdiction of the court to satisfy were set up for property destroyed by the confederate forces along the Mississippi river and the bays and rivers of Virginia. These were barred by an adverse decision of the court, which ruled that only the losses which occurred from destruction on the high seas are recoverable—that any occurring within four miles from the land are not recoverable. Not long ago a member of parliament in England stood up and wanted to know what had been done in America with the balance of the Geneva award. His poor taste in mentioning the subject was greeted with appropriate silence. A perusal of this account would enlighten him as to the final and righteous destiny of the pounds sterling that were yielded up by his government under stress of moral coercion, the judgments of disinterested nations and a due regard for the power of this country to maintain its rights.

RESULTS OF FISH CULTURE

A Summary by Marshall McDonald, Showing what has been Done in American Waters

One of the bulletins of the United States fish commission, recently issued, contains the following memorandum by Marshall McDonald of results of fish culture already attained

"The carp, wherever planted under favorable conditions and receiving reasonable care and attention, have grown, bred and multiplied rapidly. Thirty thousand distinct bodies of water in every section of the United States have been occupied with this fish. These represent an aggregate area of 100,000 acres of waste water which have been converted to profitable, almost spontaneous, production—yielding, at a moderate estimate, 20,000,000 pounds of food per annum, and adding $1,000,000 annually to the value of the production of the country.

"The black bass has been acclimated in all of the rivers of the Atlantic slope, and, while not increasing the aggregate food product of the areas occupied by them, the introduction of this game fish has indirectly contributed to the prosperity of various sections by attracting sportsmen and summer residents

"The mountain sections of New York, New Hampshire and Vermont have their game and fish well preserved through the efforts of the state fish commissioners—the trout streams being kept up by artificial propagation or planting and by protection. The summer visitors who are drawn to this region by the fame of its hunting and fishing leave there annually $10,000,000, according to the statements of the New Hampshire commissioner. The larger part of this is to be credited to the efforts in artificial propagation systematically carried on there

"The efforts to acclimate California salmon on the Atlantic slope and in the Mississippi basin have proved abortive—unfavorable temperature conditions, as I have elsewhere shown, having militated against success. This, however, is to be regarded as an experiment in acclimation rather than in fish-culture—the artificial propagating and planting of this species in the Sacramento river having carried the annual production of that river up to double the volume it had before planting was inaugurated, and added to its aggregate value $300,000 per annum.

The propagating and planting of whitefish in the great lakes was undertaken in the face of a rapid decrease, which foreshadowed the exhaustion of these fisheries in a few years. This decrease has been arrested, and the product is again slowly on the increase

The results of the artificial propagation and planting of shad cannot, in the absence of accurate statistics covering the whole coast, be definitely stated. There is no question but the production of the Chesapeake area as a whole is steadily on the increase, though local causes determine local failures of the fisheries each season, local statistics being the only measure of increase that we have, of course can furnish us no data by which we can determine the general advance in production. This, however, is shown by the increased cost per pound of the shad from season to season in the face of a continually increasing demand brought about by increasing population and increased facilities for distribution—the price today in the markets of Baltimore and Washington being from $5 to $20 per hundred and from three to four cents per pound."

THE STOREY PALACE

The Wonderful Mansion in Chicago that was Built by a Crazy Editor

The mansion built by Wilbur F. Storey, the demented editor of the Chicago Times, is of marble, four or five stories high and contains eighty rooms. If Mr. Storey dreamed of the biggest newspaper on earth, Mrs. Storey's visions were of the biggest and costliest house. That the grand mansion is yet incomplete after five years of work, was her idea no one who knew Storey in his vigor doubts. Nobody cared less for such things than he. He is said to have been told by the spirits that he should build the house, and as he was at that time completely under the influence of the shadowy visitors he promptly began operations. After a little he lost faith in the spirits, but he kept right on with his palace. When finished it will have cost about $400,000 and the question which agitates some sections of Chicago society is "who will live in it?" It is not probable that Mrs. Storey ever will, though that has been the cherished hope of her life.

The proceedings already had in the Storey case indicate that a prodigious will contest is coming, as soon as the breath leaves the old man's body. When he married his present wife she entered into a contract with him to surrender her dower rights in consideration of a sum of money to be proportionate to his estate. He then made a will confirming this ante-nuptial agreement and providing that she should have $10,000 a year [illegible]. [illegible] Since his mind failed she claims that he has prepared another will, giving her all his property with the exception of a few bequests to relatives. This will is in her possession, and the other is in the vaults of the office. Mrs. Storey is a woman of commanding presence, ultra fashionable in dress and high ambition. It is said to be her aim to be the owner and personal manager of her husband's newspaper and to live in the grand palace on the boulevard. In this she is backed by some shrewd newspaper men who would expect, in the event of her success, to be given positions of trust and profit under her.

A Bewitched Gown at [illegible]

[illegible]

A very singular case has come out recently in regard to a young girl who was engaged to be married. [illegible] was poor and her intended husband bought her a wedding dress at an expense of about $[illegible]. Before the wedding day the bridegroom was [illegible] and died. The bride mourned his loss and finally imagined that he was present at [illegible] and that she would [illegible] be married to him. She told her parents how she felt and they told her that she must get rid of the wedding dress. She sold it for $10 to an acquaintance and soon recovered her spirits. The girl who bought the dress after she got it imagined that she would lead a bad life, and was so affected that she was out of her head, and her parents sent the dress back and she recovered. No. 1 was soon affected as before, and so much so that she sent the dress back to No. 2 again, and then she recovered. No. 2 was again affected, and an attempt was made to return the dress to No. 1, but her family declined to receive it. This morning a police officer was sent to take the dress back, after consultation with counsel, but neither party would receive it, and now the friends of the officer are looking to see him go off his base on account of the dress. It would seem as though the old Salem witches possessed the dress, and it is barely possible that the garment may be burned.

Any field that will produce clover may be gradually restored to fertility if such crops are grown and turned under, especially if rotation be observed.

THE PRESBYTE[illegible]

Reports on Publication, on Missionary Work, on Contributions, Sunday Schools and Other Subjects

The following are reports of general interest that were presented to the synod of the Columbia, at its recent session in Seattle

REPORT ON PUBLICATION

In examining the different departments of the work connected with this board we are impressed with the vastness and the variety of the interests committed to its charge

By means of this single agency the church is carrying on the business of a publishing house, a newspaper office and a book store, wholesale and retail, in addition to supervising the work of colportage, and determining, so far as they may, the organization and instruction of 6476 Sabbath schools in which nearly 600,000 pupils are receiving religious influence and training.

Its publications number 2500 of these 1500 are distinct volumes. The number of new books published during the year has been 53. The whole number of books issued 22,000. The aggregate of publications including tracts, pamphlets and Sunday school helps, 15,195,8[illegible]. Attention is called to an important amendment of the by-laws of this board required by the last general assembly. "It appears from the by-laws as previously framed that each secretary be made ex officio a member of all permanent committees, and that the number required to constitute a quorum of such committee was five and in some cases six. These provisions enabled the three secretaries and two or three other members of the board to form a quorum of any committee, and thus give to the secretaries undue power. The amendment effects that the corresponding secretary is a member of the missionary committee, the editorial secretary a member of the publishing committee and the secretary of Sunday school work, a member of the Sunday school committee." Attention is called in this connection to several other recommendations of the assembly's standing committee, as adopted by the assembly. On account of the pressure that has been brought to bear upon the board from various quarters, during the past few years, a great reduction has been made in the price of the board's publications, amounting to about 30 per cent. Few are aware of the advantages of purchasing Sunday school books of the board. If any book purchased is found to be objectionable, it may be returned with a written statement of the objections, and either its price or another volume of the same price will be sent to the purchaser.

MISSIONARY DEPARTMENT

In reference to the missionary department of the board, we observe with pleasure that the good precedent of the year closing April, 1884, has been repeated, and this department is reported to the general assembly as self supporting, having met all its expenses from the contributions of the churches without calling upon the publishing department for aid

In its last report to the general assembly the board desires to have the ministry emphasize afresh that all the contributions from the churches are used by the missionary department of the board. Not one dollar of them ever goes to the publishing department. There seems to be much confusion concerning this matter, and pains should be taken to correct a misapprehension and instruct the church, enabling its members to contribute intelligently to all the causes which appeal to them for assistance. A little tract, published by the board, entitled "To what do Presbyterians give," might with great advantage be distributed and redistributed among all our churches

The board's work commends itself heartily to our approval for the fact that through the missionary department during the past year a larger number of volumes has been circulated than in any previous year, for the same money

Eighty four colporters are at work in twenty synods and ninety five presbyteries. "To secure persons in all respects well qualified to perform the arduous and delicate duties of the colporter and to sift out those from among applicants many of whom are totally unfit for the service, is no easy thing. But through the exercise of great and constant care it is believed that very few mistakes have been made, and that the board's band of colporters to-day as a body are unusually well qualified for their work and are doing it well. In the whole of the past year no more than two or three expressions of doubt or fear in regard to any one of the board's colporters have been communicated from any part of the wide field

Three colporters are at work in this synod, all of whom have been commissioned since last year. Mr. Angus McKenzie on Puget sound, Elder Ford in Idaho, and Mr. John Adair in the Presbytery of Oregon. We note with satisfaction the establishment of a depository of the board's publications in the city of Portland at No. [illegible] Morrison street, in charge of Mr. J. R. Ewing. If all works as well as [illegible] with his desire and capacity to please and accommodate the public in his line of business as at some [illegible], it would be a [illegible] endorsement of the [illegible] committee appointed one year ago by the Presbytery of Oregon to secure this depository.

We make very brief mention of the Sunday school work as connected with the work of the board of publication. Suffice it to say: first, that during the past nine years 863 new Sunday schools have been organized through the instrumentality of the missionary department of the board, [illegible] of which organizations were created during the past year; second, that 570,700 out of 680,[illegible] scholars are represented as using Westminster helps, and third that the success of the bible correspondence school opened for the first time last November, has far outrun the hopes of Dr. Worden and its immediate originators.

CONTRIBUTIONS

In our whole church composed of [illegible] individual churches, but 2350 contributed to this fund $35,96[illegible], being a gain of eighty-one contributing churches, but a falling off in the amount contributed of a little more than $3000. Of the sixty-four churches of this synod, only seventeen contributed $105, being a gain of four contributing churches, but a falling off in amount contributed of $110.

By general [illegible]	80 [illegible]
By synod	[illegible]
By Presbytery of Oregon	1030
By Presbytery of Idaho	0690
By Presbytery of Puget sound	0 30

The amount recommended by the general assembly for the current year commencing April 1, is $75,000, more than double that of last year, being [illegible] cents per member. This would call for the following amounts from us

Synod	[illegible]
Presbytery of Oregon	[illegible]
Presbytery of Idaho	[illegible]
Presbytery of Puget sound	110 [illegible]

Respectfully submitted,

J. H. CONDIT, Chairman

REPORT—MINISTERIAL RELIEF

The permanent committee of the Synod on the board of ministerial relief would respectfully report that it is with peculiar gratitude to our heavenly father that we present a review of the twenty-fifth annual report of the board. During this period the existence of the board, it has received and disbursed [illegible] aged and disabled ministers [illegible] families about one and [illegible]

The [illegible] recipients of the gifts of this board are in [illegible] able. The ministry of the Presbyterian church we believe is second to none in intelligence and fitness for preaching the gospel. Our church requires an educated ministry and will not accept any other. And hence a large expenditure of time and means must be incurred by those who are candidates to the gospel ministry of the Presbyterian church. As our ministers are [illegible] debarred from entering secular pursuits to secure at least, in part, a support, they are therefore dependent on the liberality of the church for their sustenance and that of their family. This is of an indeed very [illegible].

And hence it is said that one in five of our ministers or of their families, comes to want. To provide for the destitute ones this board has been organized. The cause represented by this board has ever been near to the heart of the church, and has been gaining in favor with our people from year to year. The past year has been more prosperous than any preceding year in its history. More churches have contributed to its funds than ever before, and also contributed more largely.

The receipts from all sources have been $112,875. Besides these contributions, which have come from our churches, our Sabbath schools have aided this cause also by their gifts. But while these gifts from various sources have increased the number of our beneficiaries has also increased. The whole number on the roll of the board is about 500—206 ministers, 252 widows, 31 orphans.

One of the most pleasing facts your committee have to report in connection with the work of the board, is that a ministers' home has been opened in October last for the care of these dependent ones.

This institution is located at Perth Amboy, and consists of a beautiful mansion donated to the board as a Saint's Rest for these worn-out soldiers of the cross.

In closing, while we have to make grateful mention of the fact that by the kind providence of God there is but one member of our synod who has been compelled to seek aid from the board, and yet we trust that the brethren will bear in mind the scriptural principle, that if one brother suffer, all suffer, and that their sympathies will be more fully manifested toward these afflicted brethren and their families, by leading them to extend to the board an [illegible] support as they are able, by each one having a collection taken up for the board during the year.

REPORT ON SUNDAY SCHOOLS

"Your committee have examined the statistics and statements of work in two of our three Presbyteries, no report in general change along [illegible]. The per cent of increase has been greater in our synod during the past year than in any other synod of our church at [illegible] 33, the next highest being that of Utah which report a gain of 25 per cent. It is with great pleasure we note this interest in our schools, for we fully realize that the success of our churches depend in a great measure upon the work of the Sabbath school, the vestibule of the church. Nothing, it would seem, but a repetition of the scenes of 1857 can turn the adult mind on this western coast, from its grasping greed of gain. The children are impressible, and may under these Christian influences be brought to a saving knowledge of Christ. It is however, with a feeling of sadness that we record the reception of so small a number of children from the school into the church of our Lord, there being but forty-two in all. Puget sound reports eight, Oregon thirty-two and Idaho two.

The shorter catechism is taught in twenty-seven schools, this being less than one-half. Although we are but following the lead of other schools in this matter, we cannot but deplore the fact that we are ignoring one of the best helps to a thorough comprehension of the word, throwing aside the means which helped to make our church what it is to-day. We cannot afford to slight our catechism unless it interfere with our study of the bible. We think we can safely say, however, that in those schools where the catechism is most thoroughly taught, the bible is held in highest esteem.

We would call attention to the fact that many of our schools are not using the lesson helps of our board. It may be the helps of some other publishing houses are sold at lower figures, but in almost every case they are inferior to ours. By patronizing our own board of publication we make it possible for them to sell at lower rates

Teachers' meetings are conducted in ten of our churches—not as many as we could wish, but we must take into consideration the comparative newness of the whole field, the recent organization of numerous schools and the feeble condition of many more. The desirability of beginning this work of teaching the teachers has been emphasized so much of late that there is no need to reiterate it here.

There is one error into which many schools are falling and which calls for words of warning. It is the mistake of trying to crowd into a brief hour what cannot be thoroughly taught in two, or even three hours. There is a time and place for everything, and the Sunday school hour should be confined to the study of the Sunday school lesson, and we ought to avoid the dragging in of any subject foreign to it. If it were within our province we would suggest the advisability of short lessons. To go beyond an hour and a half will weary both teachers and scholars, should promptness characterize the services, an hour would be sufficient. It certainly would have the advantage of securing the assistance of the best helpers, whose other duties on the Sabbath day are ofttimes arduous, and to whom the Sabbath is at any time a day of work rather than of rest.

J. R. McGRATHOYD, Temporary chairman Sunday school committee

The committee on division of the territory between the synodical missionaries, reported: "That Rev. Mr. Thompson's field be co-terminous with the boundaries of the territory of Washington, that to Rev. Mr. Hill is assigned the remaining part of the territory, consisting of Idaho Presbytery, together with Alaska and the state of Oregon."

To the Synod of the Columbia: Your special committee, to whom was referred the report of the Synodical missionary, reports as follows

That the facts presented in the Synodical missionary's report call for the hearty gratitude of the synod. The increase of ministers and churches within our bounds, has been very encouraging, and gives promise of largely extended work for our master during the ensuing year. The presence and inspiration of the holy spirit, without which there can be no real religious life, will make our beloved church a mighty power in this new north west. Let us earnestly pray that he may dwell very richly in the hearts of all our ministers and the congregations under their charge. Thus only can we be able to do our share toward laying deep and broad the foundations of society, the principles of our lord and master, Jesus Christ.

We note with great pleasure the development of our mission work in Alaska. We believe that the location of schools and churches have been wisely selected. The rules for conducting the boarding and other schools, under the care of our missionaries, seem to have been drawn up with great care, and promise, if carried out, to produce excellent results. The amount of money (nearly $30,000) expended by our board of missions in Alaska during the past year gives us a right to hope that the Lord's work may be so blest as to yield very gratifying returns, in the day when he shall gather his increase from the harvest field of this world.

We recommend that some practical shape be given to the suggestion of our synodical missionary to-wit: That in all our new towns and growing villages suitable lots for church purposes should be secured and held with a view to future growth. To carry this purpose into effect, we advise each presbytery not already an incorporated body to immediately take steps looking to incorporation, to the end that all property may be received and held in trust for the church by the holders of the permanent offices of the presbytery, and the synodical missionary would be relieved from the burden of taxes on, or other expenses which he cannot bear. More over each presbytery would thus know exactly how much property and where located is owned by our denomination within their bounds. We recommend that all our missionaries keep a vigilant eye upon the growth of towns and villages, as well as farming communities in their respective neighborhoods, with a view to securing lots for church erection, and the institution of religious ordinances wherever the [illegible] seems to call for the operations of our church

We recommend that the stated clerk transmit to the editor [illegible] a copy of our synodical mission to the Occident for publication

We heartily endorse the labors of our synodical missionary, Rev. R. N. Hill, and recommend that he be recommended to this work for another year. Inasmuch as his report shows the necessity of help in operating his wide field, we recommend that such help be furnished as the case requires, either by securing a presbyterial missionary or by dividing the field covered by the synod and asking the board to commission two synodical missionaries—one to look after the work in Oregon, Idaho and Alaska, and the other to care for Washington territory, and possibly the three most northern counties of Idaho.

NOTE AND COMMENT

The New York Tribune says: It is stated that Gen. Grant will receive $10,000 for his history of the war from The Century. The great commander prefers a fixed sum outright to a royalty.

Colonel Edmund Richardson, the cotton king, has twenty-three cotton plantations under successful operation in Washington and Issaquena counties in Mississippi. Each of these places has from 1300 to 1600 acres under cultivation, one [illegible] is employed to every ten acres.

Calhoun county, with a population of 8000, is the only county in Illinois without a mile of railroad, a telegraph office, an express office or a bank. The typical resident is part hunter, part farmer, and largely loafer. It is, of course, hardly necessary to state that the county is democratic.

A touching scene was witnessed at the deathbed of Willie Mahar, a 9-year-old orphan who died of hydrophobia in Brooklyn. Toward evening his body and limbs grew black from blood-poisoning. He remained conscious however, until morning, when, extending his arms upward, he exclaimed: "Papa, papa, I am coming!" and died.

Jouffroy, and not Robert Fulton, was the inventor of the steamboat, according to the French. They raised a statue to his memory at Besancon on the 18th of August, in which he is represented as standing thoughtful, with one hand on his first steam engine.

New York Star: The editorial page of the Herald has come to bear a close resemblance to a first-class patent inside of a far west weekly. It is evident that the Herald having searched all the world has taken to the wilderness for a model.

TATTOOED MEN.

From the fact that the democratic [illegible] has always been so exacting as [illegible] the republican candidates for the [illegible] it might be inferred that the party was [illegible] of a superabundance of virtue. Never has it been possible for the republicans to nominate a man who would come up to the standard of democratic excellence. True, that party never has been so hard to please as [illegible] its own candidates, and this year in particular it is [illegible] with an obscure, heavy and lumpish individual, a man of dull mind, coarse nature and lewd habits; but for all that the republicans, in their nomination this year have come as far short of the democratic ideal as at any former time. For twenty-eight years the republican candidates for the presidency have been met by torrents of abuse from those who have never seen in the ignominious history of their own party during that long period anything to disapprove, and regularly every four years it has been declared that the country would be disgraced, dishonored, ruined in name, reputation and character, if the tattooed and disreputable candidates of the republican party were not rejected. This rage of defamation fell first on Fremont in 1856, and it is not in any special degree more virulent against Blaine now than it has been against every other republican candidate who has preceded him.

Fremont, the first candidate of the republican party, the gallant pathfinder of empire, was tattooed all over with the most villainous slanders. No epithets were too vile, no scandals too outrageous, to be coupled with his name. He was a [illegible] and [illegible] a man of vicious tastes and mean extraction; his birth was attainted with bastardy; he had robbed the family of the great Thomas Benton of a daughter and brought disgrace on that family by his alliance with it; he was a renegade, because, though a native of the south, he was not an upholder of slavery, and, with a [illegible] that could find no parallel except in such traitors as Arnold, he had joined the enemies of the south to [illegible] to injure [illegible] to destroy it.

Next came Lincoln, who was attacked in much the same way. He, too, was a native of the south and therefore a renegade and traitor. He was a clown, a [illegible] man without culture or attainments. He too was of illegitimate birth, a point on which the democratic party has always come out strong, as may be seen now again in its vigorous support of Cleveland—all the more vigorous for the Halpin episode and its consequences. Lincoln was [illegible] and [illegible] that nations were lost [illegible] was incapable of anything [illegible] telling [illegible] stories that filled [illegible] people with disgust. On the whole he was [illegible] tattooed [illegible] ever was before or since, and while agonizing under the sorrows of a bleeding country his troubles were increased tenfold by the abuse and misrepresentation to which he was subjected. Harper's [illegible] of Civilization, the same that now pictures Blaine [illegible] Tweed, represented Lincoln in its cartoons and editorials as a boor, a clown and an unfeeling monster making merry with drunken companions over the [illegible] fall of republican government and jesting heartlessly over the slaughter of the thousands who were falling in battle, while such men as Hendricks, Voorhees, Vallandigham and all the leading spirits of the democratic party denounced him as a bloody tyrant, and Grover Cleveland and the rest shouted and clapped their hands wild with approval, just as his associates and fellow partisans now receive with screams of delight any new slander and epithet invented against Blaine.

In 1868 General Grant, one of the greatest captains in history, the modest unassuming soldier, the man of the people, was tattooed as a liar, a bloody butcher, a drunken sot, a peculator of cotton funds, the executioner of an innocent woman, the betrayer of President Johnson, and later, as the head of the whisky ring that was robbing the treasury with his help and giving him a large share of the profits, as the tool of Wall street, the author of "Black Friday," and whatever else malignity could invent. In 1876 Governor Hayes, one of the best men the country has ever produced, was tattooed in much the same way. Having organized a scheme to steal the presidency, the democratic managers found the machinery they had constructed turned against them; bulldozing was defeated, bribery failed, the effort to buy electoral colleges, including that of Oregon, came to naught, and then Hayes was tattooed as the usurper, as the fraudulent president, as the man who had dishonored himself by taking a position which he knew rightfully belonged to another.

In 1880 General Garfield, a man unsurpassed in all our history as an orator and statesman, distinguished as well in war as in peace, was the tattooed man. He became the object of most outrageous slanders, was denounced upon the allegation that he had used his official station corruptly; he had taken Credit Mobilier bribes, and had committed perjury to conceal it; if he were elected it would be a sign that the people had lost all sense of honor, and corruption would be placed in state at the head of the government. And the ghouls that had hounded him in life followed him with their vituperation to the grave and beyond; they assert even yet that he sold an appointment on the supreme bench for a contribution of $100,000 to a corruption fund for his own election and continue to disgrace civilization and humanity by other similarly [illegible] slanders.

That Blaine would escape this torrent of obloquy was not to be expected. The crown which the republican party reserves for its greatest men has been placed upon his brow and as in the past it has become the signal for the opening of all the filthy democratic sewers in the country. He is tattooed as his predecessors have been, but probably with no deeper malignity than any of the rest. It would have been the same, no matter who had been nominated. Yet it would seem that the failure of the tattooing policy during so long a period ought to have taught its authors a lesson. Were they not blind as moles to the temper of the people they must for policy's sake have changed their tactics long ago, but they have not. The campaign of 1884 is but a repetition of those that have gone before ever since the republican party came into existence. The people understand the policy of abuse and slander and misrepresentation. Lincoln, whom these defamers would have consigned to an oblivion of shame, holds the highest place in our national pantheon, and Garfield is beside him. Grant lives in retirement, rich alone in the admiration not only of America but of the world. The "tattooing" of the democratic party has never yet done any harm to the "tattooed." It has always reacted with terrible force and always will. It is a badge of honor reserved for [illegible] eminent men. It is a revelation too of the character of the democratic party. Note who they are that it defames, and note [illegible] who are the objects of its praise. It reveals itself as much through its defamation of such men as Lincoln, Garfield and Blaine as through its unstinted praise of such coarse, dull and gross natures as that of Grover Cleveland, who was selected for his popularity with the baser classes of men, including those who think [illegible] personal [illegible] of lewd [illegible] who regard [illegible] and who insist upon [illegible] society.

The impropriety [illegible] allowing judges and state officers to accept passes from the railroads in whose interests they are constantly called in one form or another to act has been brought freshly before the people of Vermont through the libel suit of the chief justice against a newspaper which accused him of accepting bribes, and the retiring governor, in his farewell message to the legislature, recommends that the judges be paid, in addition to their regular salary, the cost of their railroad and stage fares while traveling on official duty. A bill has also been introduced in the senate to increase their salaries, and to forbid them, or any member of their families, to accept passes from any railroad in the state.

A [illegible]

[illegible] Mr Garrett, the late president of the Baltimore and Ohio railroad, has had few [illegible] imitators among the young men who have made railroad business their vocation during the period in which he has been so conspicuous as a successful railroad manager. He was the last of the old school of managers in this country who did something to develop the American railway system. His idea of a railroad was that it [illegible] a business enterprise, and he showed that he could make one of the great trunk lines of the country a success without the good will of either the bulls or the bears of the stock exchange. He did this by making the value of his stock dependent upon the dividends and the dividends dependent on the earnings. He gave to his road an actual, not a speculative value, and it stands to-day a monument of his enterprise and sagacity. The Baltimore and Ohio railroad was built largely by state and city aid, and when Mr Garrett's attention was first attracted to it its management was dominated by politicians. He discovered, says the New York Herald, "that corruption of the foulest kind prevailed, and that the railroad was being run in the interest of political tricksters instead of being managed in a business-like way for the benefit of those who had invested their money in it. Armed with an array of startling statistics, and with documents that fully bore out the charges he was about to make, he went to the meeting of stockholders. The speech that he made and the resolutions that he caused to be carried wrought a wonderful change in the management of the railroad. He was elected a director, and from that time until now has been the leading power in the company. In 1858, on the motion of the late Johns Hopkins, he was elected president of the road."

Mr Garrett at once inaugurated that policy of economy, retrenchment and personal supervision that has ever since characterized his management, the first practical result of which was the payment to the stockholders in the spring of 1859 of the first of an unbroken series of dividends that has continued to this day, and raised the value of the stock from $57, the highest quotation at the time when he became president, to something over $200 to-day. In the meantime he has extended the main line and built branches without increasing to any considerable extent the capital stock of the company and without contracting a debt equal to that of many roads of far less mileage and business. After he became president [illegible] by a unanimous vote increased his salary from $[illegible] to $[illegible] per annum. The increase Mr Garrett declined [illegible] has since repeatedly declined to accept the presidencies of other railroads, though [illegible] tempted in one case by an offer of a salary of $[illegible] [illegible] proposal [illegible] a year. His [illegible] gathered from the following extracts from his views: "[illegible] restrict dividends for the sake of long [illegible] stockholders and officers. Invest the surplus in the system. Let politics alone. Neither court it nor antagonize it. Particularly do not corrupt it, or you will get its appetite [illegible] and it will gnaw you all your days. Responsibility in the working force, conservatism in the management, patience in the stockholders. Do not fool with localisms. Side branches must construct themselves. Push for large terminal points and the side places must build toward the system we extend in their general direction."

He acted on the legal view, which is also the conscience view, that a railroad manager is a trustee; that the property committed to his charge must not be used to promote speculative schemes of his own to the detriment of the stockholders, nor to aid his political designs, nor to control, by corrupting local or general politics. He was the very opposite of Jay Gould, who has had, to the shame of the country, more imitators among railroad officers. Gould treats a railroad in which he gains a controlling interest as if it was entirely his own. Like Don Cameron in politics, all he wants is a majority of one, and that he thinks gives him autocratic power over the whole. His success as a railroad manager dates from the accident of the Tweed ring and the Tweed judiciary in the city of New York. That accident gave him and Fisk an opportunity to run off the movable property of the Erie railroad as the Indian runs off the cattle of an emigrant or settler, on the plains. By the dishonest and corrupt arts which he developed while a member of that trinity of public robbers, the Erie ring, the Tweed ring and the New York judiciary, Gould blasted Erie, the Union Pacific and the Wabash. He has been thrown out of the directories of the Rock Island, Northwestern and the Mercantile Trust companies, to save them from his malign influence. And yet because he rose rapidly to wealth and power the glitter of his success has tempted young men in haste to get rich, into many snares and caused them to rely upon speculation or gambling rather than upon honest business methods. His example is essentially corrupting, because he wields so much power that, although he is known everywhere as a bandit and pirate whose clammy fingers mildew every property he touches, men in high position in business and politics feel compelled to give him a certain deference which is mistaken for approval of his methods. But the sober second thought will come, we trust, on a review of Mr Garrett's career, and honesty will in the end be preferred to piracy. The time will come when Mr Garrett's business life will be prized as one of the most instructive in the business history of the country.

OBLIGATIONS OF LAWYERS.

It is not a new idea, but still Mr Thornton could not have properly omitted in such an address as the one which he delivered at the opening of the law school last evening, to say that "as it is the purpose of the law, so it should be the aim of the legal practitioner, to secure the ends of justice—not of an impossible and chimerical ideal, but of that justice which the law requires. An attorney "has no right to obtain for his own client an unconscionable or mean advantage, or to delay any man's cause for lucre or malice. That attorney, who in a certain case deceived the court by inserting a false leaf in an almanac, has been sometimes commended for his smartness. But in fact he violated his professional oath, and deserved to be thrown over the bar. One can imagine the outburst of indignation which such a proceeding would have called forth from a Marshall, or a Shaw, or a Hill, or Kenyon. And many transactions are less evidently scandalous than this, which are nevertheless repudiated by all men who have a fine sense of professional honor."

Next to a corrupt court there is scarcely any center of influence and power so demoralizing to a community and detrimental to all its interests as a dishonest and venal bar. And thus city is to be congratulated on the awaking sense of professional honor that is exhibited in the effort of the bar to purge itself by the expulsion of dishonest members. The reports which a committee of the bar has been appointed to investigate are very serious in their character, affecting the interests of the general public as well as the reputation of the bar. When judgments can be obtained fraudulently, and the records of the court are abstracted and perjury is suborned, the profession is not only brought into disrepute and the administration of justice disturbed, but every public and private interest is imperiled, personal and property rights are jeopardized and the corruption beginning at the fountain of justice spreads through the community. When the people despair of justice they will either take the law in their own hands, as in Cincinnati a few months ago and attempt its execution, or they will proceed without law to take care of themselves, as in the old days when "[illegible] who had the power," and those who could keep what was thus obtained.

On the other hand a high minded and incorruptible bar, whose members recognize their duties to their clients and to the public, and to justice, is of immeasurable benefit to the local community and to the state. There are many public duties which no class of men can perform so well as lawyers, and if lawyers will not attend to them as a rule they are neglected altogether. There is scarcely any public abuse which it is not in their power to detect and correct. The practice of their profession brings them into an immediate and intimate acquaintance with [illegible] wrong and enables them to discover and apply the remedy. And their opportunity to serve the public in this manner carries with it an obligation which they ought to recognize. We trust that the proceedings which have been commenced for the purification of the Portland bar will be vigorously prosecuted, and that the bar will not be satisfied with such a vindication of its honor as the expulsion of unworthy members will effect, but that it will seek a higher vindication in efforts to reform the law, and so far as possible, correct every abuse in its administration.

ADVERTISING SWINDLES.

Perhaps it is too much to expect that any city will ever be free from humbug advertising schemes. Yet much could be done to abate this fraud and nuisance if all men of sense would set their faces resolutely against [illegible] solicited to become patrons of these advertising dodges gotten up as catch-penny games by men too worthless to engage in a proper occupation, they ought to refuse, because all such dodges are simply methods of swindling. Business men get nothing for the money so expended. Nobody ever pays the least attention to an advertisement displayed in these circulars or hand-bills, which, if noticed at all only get the contemptuous glance they deserve. All such alleged publications, commonly very numerous when fairs are being held, are the work of persons who imagine they have a right to live by preying upon the public. They know well enough they are giving no equivalent whatever for the money they seek, and the public ought to know it too. There is only one way for the business classes to reach the public, and that way is through legitimate and established newspapers. Whatever is published in them is sure of attention. The newspapers of this city are ample for all the wants of advertisers; they are universally read, their established character commends to their readers the houses that advertise through their columns and as they are conducted by men who know what advertising is and what it is worth, it is a proper thing on their part to warn the public against the fraudulent advertising devices so frequently offered them by men who have no standing in business and no connection with the legitimate press. Another form of the advertising swindle is that so often offered by some [illegible] class paper in San Francisco or elsewhere which nobody here ever saw or cared for. The representative of such a paper, which is worth nothing as an advertising medium at home and therefore must look out for business abroad, offers to "write up" [illegible] advertisements with cuts or illustrations of business houses [illegible] a certain number of copies of the issue [illegible] The money so [illegible] by the advertiser [illegible] The paper is not [illegible] Men who have experience in the relations of business to advertising all know themselves to be [illegible] who are trying to work these pretended advertising schemes. They know that all such devices are fraudulent and treat them accordingly.

The Montgomery (Ala.) Citizen of Sept [illegible] contains this: "In [illegible] county the assessed valuation of farm implements is $[illegible], and of revolvers, guns, etc., $[illegible]. In Fayette county the value of farm implements is set down at $4, and of revolvers, guns etc. $[illegible]." This is a very proper showing for a people whose chief industry is shot-gun politics.

Were not the democratic party of Ohio thoroughly identified with and solidly supported by the liquor traffic and the whole range of concomitant and collateral immoralities, it would be overthrown by an enormous majority. It is drawing on these disreputable sources for more than one hundred thousand votes, and will get them.

"I am a merchant and planter," writes Mr [illegible] Humphrey of Tennessee, "and it gives me great pleasure to say that for severe coughs and colds Allen's Lung Balsam is the best remedy now offered for sale. I have induced many to try it with the best results."

Joe Silver, charged with selling liquor to Indians, changed his mind yesterday and pleaded guilty in the United States district court. He was fined $10.

D. W. Prentice has just published a new song "Hear dem Ebening Bells," written and set to music by Jacob L. Sawyer, musical director of the Nashville students.

L. Goldberg, proprietor of a tinshop at 101 Washington street, was struck in the eye by a small piece of tin cut off by the shears. The injury was a very painful one, but not serious as the metal was quickly abstracted.

L J Lewis, a machinist in the employ of the Portland iron works, and at the time of his death, foreman, died on Wednesday at his residence, North Sixteenth and F streets, aged 42 years. The funeral yesterday was largely attended by members of Samaritan lodge No. 2 and Ellison encampment, No. 1, I. O. O. F., to which organizations deceased belonged.

The Truth About La Camas

Is, that it is the only place in the northwest unaffected by the present dull times.

Its magnificent water power and its fine location, backed by its large capital, must make it always, as it is now, the liveliest town in the northwest.

Its people are principally new men from the east who have brought large capital and abundant enterprise with them.

It is the best place in all this country for new comers to make a start in business or to get work.

It is not a real estate speculation, and has no real estate boomers.

It costs only $1 (for the round trip) and a few hours time to go and see it.

Take the steamer Traveler at the foot of Morrison street, Portland, at 7:30 P. M. daily.

On and after October 13 Robbins & Son will offer at auction sale daily, their stock of pictures, frames, mirrors and brackets in order to close out this class of goods. The firm intend to devote their entire attention to the music business and in order to do so they will find it necessary to dispose of the goods mentioned above, and propose to make sacrifices to that end. Those desirous of obtaining bargains will do well to call, at 229 First street.

LOCAL AND GENERAL.

A Baby in a Basket.—As ex-Councilman Keller and his family were seated in their cosy parlor last evening they were disturbed by a knock at the side door, which when opened, revealed ex-Councilman Honeyman. What was Keller's astonishment when Honeyman asked "Didn't you forget and leave the baby out on the front porch to-night?" While Keller was gasping for a reply Honeyman explained that his attention had been arrested as he was riding past by the wailing of an infant which he felt sure came from his former colleague's front porch. A light was procured and the whole family joined in the investigation. Sure enough, in an ordinary market basket, tucked up with a bottle of milk and quite a quantity of baby linen, was a poor little girl, about six weeks old, who whimpered as the women folk picked her up, and shivered from her exposure to the cold and damp night air. There was nothing about the waif to identify her, although it is thought the mother who has deserted her is a German, for the bottle has on it the label of a "Deutsche Apotheke," and some of the baby's clothes were wrapped up in a portion of a German newspaper. Mrs. Keller took in the waif and cared for it, but does not feel inclined to its adoption. The police were notified, detectives have examined the clothing and the basket, and an attempt will be made to discover the child's parents. Should this not be accomplished, anyone desirous of adopting a healthy, fat and growing girl-baby can do so by calling upon Mr. Keller.

Incorrigible as Ever.—Little Charley Garwood, aged twelve years, whose brother Tim is in the penitentiary and who escaped being there himself only by the pleadings of his mother and the leniency of John F. Caples, then district attorney, upon the condition that he be placed in a California reform school, has not improved any since he left this state. The following from the San Francisco Examiner, gives an account of his twice escaping from the reformatory institution in which he was confined: Charles Garwood, aged twelve years, who, in company with Bird Brumfield, made his escape from the Boys' and Girls' Aid Society a few days ago, is again before the public in the role of a full-fledged burglar. He was captured in Oakland and returned to the society, where he was stripped of his clothes and confined in an upper room along with another boy who was undergoing the same punishment. From this room they planned an escape by lowering themselves to the window of an apartment occupied by Oliver Lovel, one of the assistant superintendents. They then helped themselves to $100 in a trunk and, supplied with clothing from the dormitory, made their escape by the water pipe. They were recaptured in Sacramento Saturday afternoon.

Burglars Again.—After a few weeks of quiet, probably caused by the scare the fraternity received when one of their number was interviewed by Dr. Falkingham's shotgun, reports of burglars and their doings have been received at police headquarters. Some time Wednesday night the house of James Bruce, who lives on Q street, between Sixteenth and Seventeenth, North Portland, was broken into and the rooms ransacked, the burglars, however, getting only a little over $11 in cash. A few days before Mr. Bruce had had $140 in the house, and he supposes that his moonlight visitors were aware of this fact and were not aware that he had deposited it in a safer place the very next day. At all events the burglars were well acquainted with the house, as is shown by their carrying on their depredations and making their escape without arousing any of the slumbering inmates. This section of the city is still infested with tramps, vagabonds and thieves, despite the efforts of the police, and other crimes will probably soon be heard from. Revolvers and guns have been pretty generally adopted as household protectors in that locality, and the enterprising burglar had better beware as to what houses he enters in the pursuit of his profession.

Y. M. C. A. Matters.—The ladies of the auxiliary committee will give a reception next Monday evening in the parlors of the Y. M. C. A. to the visiting delegates to the convention which is to be held in the city next week. The board of directors will meet this evening. The class in double entry bookkeeping opened with twenty members, under the able direction of Professor R. K. Warren, the class in mechanical drawing, T. Josenhans in charge, opened with a very favorable outlook, the class in new gymnastics, under the able director of the Rev. George H. Lee, was entered into with a good degree of interest by the young men present. Classes in elocution, conducted by Miss A. R. Luse, and German, by T. Josenhans, meet next Tuesday evening; also that in gymnastics, under the direction of Mr. Torry, assistant secretary of the association. Young men are invited to come and examine the gymnasium and the improved apparatus, and enjoy the privileges of the association.

Giving Notice of Election.—County Clerk Sanders, "according to the statutes in such cases made and provided," has caused to be printed a large number of cloth posters, giving notice to the citizens of Multnomah county that on Tuesday, the 4th day of November, polls will be opened in the various precincts for the election of three presidential electors. To-day the sheriff will start out his deputies and they will nail up a certain number of these posters in every precinct, and charge the county ten cents a mile, besides their regular salary, for so doing. There probably was once a time when these notices were news to the inhabitants of the most remote precincts, but in this present day and age, with the mail, the telegraph and the newspaper voicing every hour the current events of the whole country, one might as well announce the coming of Christmas as of a presidential election even in the "cow counties of Oregon."

Dedication of Grace M. E. Church.—The new Grace Methodist Episcopal chapel, corner of Taylor and Eleventh streets, will be dedicated to divine worship to-morrow. Rev. E. W. Caswell, the pastor, will have charge of the services during the entire day. Rev. S. P. Wilson of East Portland will preach the morning sermon and Rev. Dr. H. K. Hines will occupy the desk in the evening. The pastor will be assisted by the Revs. G. M. Pierce, E. P. Tower, J. H. Acton and others during the services. The public are cordially invited. The building of a chapel by this young and vigorous society was decided upon less than two months since. Now it stands completed and ready for occupancy. If equal vigor is shown in the various departments of church work, Grace M. E. will soon take a position in the front ranks among our city churches.

Rod and Gun Club.—Last night the Multnomah Rod and Gun club elected the following officers: President, J. W. Whalley; vice president, E. W. Moore; secretary, H. C. Macdonald; treasurer, Mr. Macintosh. The following new members were added: E. D. McKee, Geo. Walker, Frank T. Dodge, Thos. Strowbridge, Geo. Bliss, J. W. Keane and W. A. Eberle. A committee consisting of Messrs. Moore, Macdonald, Curry and Abell, was appointed to arrange a programme for the annual club hunt and supper and for the entertainment of the Seattle club, should they decide to accept the invitation to come over and join in the hunt. The committee will report to a special meeting to be called Monday evening next.

Applied for a New Trial.—The attorneys for Oscar F. Becker, convicted of arson, yesterday made application before Judge Smith in the state circuit court for a new trial, upon the grounds already stated in these columns several days ago. The motion was argued before the court at some considerable length and finally submitted, Judge Smith announcing that he would not decide upon the matter for a day or two. Pending his decision, therefore, he postponed the time of Becker's sentence until Monday.

Ministerial Association.—Ministers of evangelical churches in our city and vicinity are requested to meet at the Y. M. C. A. chapel, corner First and Salmon streets, Monday, October 13, at 10 A. M., to organize a ministerial association. This call is issued by vote of nearly a dozen of our city ministers, who met at the call of Dr. Lindsley, Monday, September 29.

No Family Resemblance.—Hedges, the convicted forger, has a brother in Ohio, Henry C. Hedges, who is a candidate for congress this year from the Sixteenth district. The Mansfield (Ohio) Herald speaks of him as "a man of unimpeachable honor and integrity, void of guile and trickery, and is also possessed of large ability, right principles and earnest convictions."

Races at Hillsboro.—The trot at Hillsboro yesterday between Mollie Rawn and Fred Hamilton, best two in three, mile heats, was won by the mare in two straight heats; time, 3:24 and 3:2... In the running race, mile and repeat, between Jim Merritt and Glenbrook, Merritt won in two straight heats; time 1:56 and 2 minutes.

Trinity Church.—To-morrow, the 12th of October, Bishop Morris will institute the Rev. George W. Foote into the rectorship of Trinity church, assisted by the bishop of Washington territory. Morning prayer at 9 o'clock. Institution service, with sermon and holy communion, at 11 o'clock.

To the Fair.—Vancouverites can come over on the Lurline this evening and on Wednesday evening next, as arrangements have been made to run on those evenings to the fair.

AGAINST THE N. P.

Portland Merchants Very Bitter Towards the Company.

WILL THEY FAVOR THE SHORT LINE?

Views of Representative Houses—Reasons Why They Will Withdraw Support from the Northern and Give It to the Union Pacific.

There is strong probability that a large share of the heaviest shippers in Portland will sign contracts with the Union Pacific, the Short Line and the O. R. & N. before the end of this year, and will cease to ship from the east by the Northern Pacific. This statement will be received by the people of the northwest coast with surprise, but the action above mentioned is contingent on only one thing, viz. that the Northern Pacific continues its present attitude toward Portland. It is an open secret that nearly all wholesale merchants have been dissatisfied with the policy of the Northern Pacific ever since the change in management at the beginning of this year. Yet they were not inclined to be vigorous in protests because they felt that the new officers were probably not well informed as to the details of the traffic. Grievances were presented to the management through traffic officers, and then there was patient waiting to have them adjusted. But no attention was paid to the complaints, and subsequent action by the company showed that they did not choose to advance Portland's mercantile interests, if indeed they did not intend to injure it.

So long as the Northern Pacific was master of the situation, grievances were nursed, and no one was anxious to answer the apparent question by the railroad, "What are you going to do about it?" The merchants will be prepared to answer before the 31st of December next, by which time the present contracts with the Northern Pacific will have expired. By that time the Oregon Short Line and the Baker City branch will have completed their junction and trains will probably be running smoothly between Portland and Omaha. In order to learn the feeling among business men on this vital question, an Oregonian reporter was detailed yesterday to call on leading wholesale dealers and get an expression of views. It was somewhat of a surprise to learn that the question had been discussed among merchants in all its minor features and bearings, and that every man approached was ready with a statement which was given without hesitation or equivocation. Unless the expressions of intent were made for a "bluff," it is evident that Portland will link her trade interests with the new line, unless the Northern Pacific makes a radical change in its policy.

The Feeling of the Trade

CAUSE FOR THE DISSATISFACTION.

One of the largest shippers in Front street was asked to specify the grievances he had against the road. What he said may be set down as the views of a majority of the wholesalers and manufacturers, and the indictment may be divided into three counts.

First—That the new management have broken faith. When the road was completed there was an explicit understanding that rates would be such that Portland could compete for the trade east of the Cascade mountains, naturally tributary to her. The boundary limit was placed at the eastern line of Idaho. Portland never had much trade east of Rathdrum and Sand Point. Of late the Northern Pacific has been cutting rates from the east to towns on the Idaho division (the old Pend d'Oreille division) so that Portland is practically shut out of the field. He quoted the following from an eastern Washington paper bearing on the point:

"The present condition of freights develops the singular fact that a merchant living in Spokane Falls can have sugar delivered at his door 1 cent a pound cheaper than the San Francisco merchant can."

Second.—When President Harris of the Northern Pacific was here last summer he was waited on by a committee of three from the board of trade relative to the policy of the company with regard to wares manufactured in Oregon. He expressed himself as decidedly in favor of fostering manufactures and promised unequivocally that rates should be made whereby Portland manufacturers could compete with those of eastern cities. This has been grossly violated in every case where eastern wares have come into competition with Portland's product, and numerous instances can be quoted where goods have been carried from New York to Spokane Falls at rates as low as from Portland to Spokane Falls. In other words, the company has steadily discriminated against Portland.

Third—That the management of the railroad had subverted the legitimate carrying business for which it was built to boom town lots in Tacoma, owned by a close corporation, composed of a few favored Northern Pacific stockholders in Philadelphia.

Whether the above complaints are founded on the cold facts THE OREGONIAN is not able to say. It simply repeats the statements as given.

AN INDIGNANT VIEW.

Said a man who has done business for twenty-two years and is noted for freedom of expression in public matters: "The Northern Pacific has made a ——d fool of itself, as usual. I can't see an inch before its face. Just because it wanted to secure the trade of three or four towns and deprive the O. R. & N. of a part of the haul it has antagonized the most important city west of Minneapolis that it reaches. There are twenty-five or thirty houses in Portland, either of which ships more goods than all the towns between Wallula Junction and Missoula combined, and yet the company is so stupid that it can't comprehend that it is breaking its neck as a transcontinental line by this shortsighted, miserly policy. Those fellows in New York have evidently been asleep and haven't heard that the Oregon Short Line will be to Portland in a few days. They will soon ... to know that somebody else has a railroad across the country to Oregon. It makes me indignant to talk about it, and I have just this to say, Unless we get from the Northern Pacific the most favorable consideration every man in the street will get his goods over the Union Pacific. Mark that. In a month we won't need the Northern Pacific any more than we need the Southern Pacific. Let them build their Cascades branch and load themselves up with another heavy debt, and operate their expensive road to —where? I don't care where they run it, they won't get as much business in a month as Portland gives them in a week. It is astounding that a company is so void of the simplest business sense as to drive away the trade of the principal terminus, and get in return the trade of half a dozen small towns which they already had. It would be like a manufacturing or importing house in New York sacrificing the trade of four or five jobbers in Front street, to secure a retailer in Albina. They will see their error before long and will yet beg Portland trade."

A CAREFUL VIEW.

Said the head of a house noted for his caution: "I have not talked with my partners on the subject, but I have thought over the matter a good deal in the last month, and I have almost reached the conclusion that if an authorized traffic officer of the Union Pacific were to ask me to ship part of our goods over his line, I would do so. I would have no fear that the Northern Pacific would refuse to carry the balance. I do not think it would be a wise thing for Portland to desert the Northern Pacific altogether and join the Union Pacific. There is some valuable trade around Spokane Falls which we can yet control, despite the present discrimination, and the company might retaliate by keeping Portland out of the Palouse country, where we have considerable good trade."

How so?" was inquired. "The O. R. & N. operate the Colfax road."

"Yes, but they have to use the Northern Pacific track from Wallula Junction to Palouse Junction, and the Northern Pacific might put on a prohibitory rate over this forty or fifty miles. Still it would be possible for Portland to reach Colfax via Snake River and Almota, and a rate might be made so low from Portland as to overcome the seventeen miles of wagon haul from Almota to Colfax. Still if Portland was to withdraw from the Northern Pacific the loss to the railroad would be so great as compared with the loss to Portland of the trade of one valley, that it would hardly look like retaliation. I would much rather see the Northern Pacific retreat from their present position, which I think will be done, and let us have the trade ... naturally tributary to us."

A VERY CONSERVATIVE VIEW.

Said a man whose mistakes in business have been remarkably few and whose freight bills have been very large for lo these many years: "The Northern Pacific have treated us shabbily, very shabbily, I might say downright mean, but I will be slow to make any change. Suppose we sign a contract to ship all our goods over the Short Line next year, and then about March or April the Northern Pacific leases the O. R. & N.? The result will be that our goods will be longer getting to Portland than the goods of our neighbors which are shipped over the Northern. Somehow or other there will be an unaccountable delay at Huntington, and the cars will get side-tracked somewhere between Huntington and Portland, and our claims for rebates will be awful slow getting through the circumlocution office, and I hope if our bills for overcharges will be in form they will be sending them back to further proof and maybe after while we would never be able to furnish enough proof. They could give us a very great deal of annoyance, and that's what every merchant tries to avoid. I will wait to see my way clear before I sign a contract with the Short Line."

"But suppose the O. R. & N. maintains a neutral position?" was asked.

"No one can tell how long it will last. I believe that the Northern Pacific must lease it for self protection. If, however, it is leased with the proviso that the O. R. & N. will continue to operate it as a separate company, not as a division of the Northern Pacific, no favoritism can be shown, and goods by either line will have like dispatch. In that case I believe a majority of the shippers will favor the Short Line unless the Northern Pacific shows a more liberal spirit."

A CAPITALIST'S VIEW.

Said a large property owner, who keeps well informed on railroad matters though not familiar with merchants' grievances: "The Northern Pacific management have town lots on Puget sound which they would like to sell at a large profit. They do not specially care whether Portland thrives or not. The Union Pacific have no town to boom. They want Portland to prosper and grow to be a great city, so that they can haul larger freight and more passengers. It is clear to me which road Portland ought to and will favor. The Union Pacific is better equipped with eastern agents than any other western railroad. Let it once be known that Portland merchants desire to establish railway connection through the Union Pacific, and there will not be a hundred pounds of freight offered for Portland in any city along the Atlantic seaboard, but some agent of the Union Pacific will be after it. I think the Northern Pacific will suffer after the Short Line is opened."

A FREE KINDERGARTEN.

The Plans for a Trial of this Charity in Portland.

Statement of the Cost of Caring for a Roomfull of Children During the Winter—An Appeal.

An effort will be made by a number of charitable ladies and gentlemen during the coming week to conduct a free kindergarten in this city for needy and neglected children for six months, commencing about November 1. The following prospectus will be circulated principally by distribution in the various churches ... now:

PROSPECTUS.

The question is frequently asked of late what can be done for children under 6 years old belonging to families of hard worked people or in some cases from neglected or broken homes. It is well known that in many cities free kindergartens have done a noble work in saving these little waifs and helping their parents also through the sunshine and orderly law carried from the school to the home. San Francisco for instance has eighteen free kindergartens, and increasing attention is evoked to this Christlike "gathering in of the lambs."

Although Portland has as yet no "Five Points" or "Tar Flat," there are throughout the city many neglected children of tender years, and in several districts we believe a free kindergarten would be accessible to from twenty to sixty children, perhaps more. Cannot the experiment be tried of one such? After careful inquiry we think it can and an estimate of the expense for six months is submitted:

Rent of room	1?0 00
Furniture	60 00
Wood, etc.	35 00
Salary of teacher	180 00
Contingent	100 00
Total for six months	$4?5 00

Several rooms belonging to societies have been spoken of as desirable and accessible. It is hoped the item of rent will be gratis.

If any surprise is felt at the smallness of this estimate, it is to be remembered that it is on a missionary basis and some allowance is made for the generosity of friends in loaning or giving material, or voluntary aid. If this sum is obtained, a location in the center of either the First or Third ward is thought of as perhaps the best for the attempt. But definite action can only be taken when an assurance is given of funds.

For this purpose, and also to test the interest of the community in "protecting work" for children, a subscription paper has been prepared, and the generous sympathy of all citizens is invoked. When the sum above named is promised, it is proposed to call a meeting of subscribers, who should elect managers and direct the method in which their bounty is to be expended. We earnestly appeal to the people of Portland for their sympathy and financial support in this movement.

Mrs C H Prescott	J McCraken,
Mrs B Goldsmith	D W Burnside,
Mrs G H Atkinson,	F K Arnold,
Mrs Mary F Stubbs,	S J Barber,
W M Ladd,	Helen F Spaulding,
Mrs W S Ladd,	Mrs C Couch,
Mrs C A Dolph	Mary P Montgomery,
Mrs Frank M Warren,	Henrietta F Failing,
Mrs Richard Hoyt,	William Wadhams
Mrs Ben Selling,	Mrs W J Van Schuyver,
Mrs J K Gill	Caroline Dunlap

The importance of this work, as a matter of political economy, to say nothing of its great charitable features, commends it to all persons interested in bettering the condition of society. This appeal is not to the wealthy alone. Subscriptions of twenty five cents a month will be received, and everyone who contributes will have a voice in the management of the kindergarten. The ladies will probably not undertake a canvass of the city, for they believe the sum above mentioned can be raised by public appeal. A subscription paper will be left at the book store of McKercher & Thompson, where any sum, however small, will be thankfully received.

Mrs. Kate S. Wiggin, superintendent of the Silver Street Kindergarten, San Francisco, in the preface to her last report of the work in that city has the following:

To those who believe that where the lambs go, the flocks will follow, and that the shield is better than the spear—to these we say that the kindergarten in its work among the poor, idle and vicious classes of society, is one of the most effective agencies with which to develop in the children of the future all those virtues of courtesy, industry, frugality, independence and honesty which we need so sorely in the world to-day, and remember—

In blessing the children of others,
You are garnering joys for your own.

To those who are wrestling with the problems of our national system of education, we would say that the thoughtful men and women of our day see in the kindergarten, when it is intelligently carried out according to the principles of its discoverer, the germ and foundation of that new and better education which shall prepare humanity for that new earth over which shall arch the new heaven.

Fire on East Side.—About half-past 1 this morning a bright light, back of the old asylum, East Portland, indicated the burning of a building. The reporter on the late watch telephoned across the river to Dr. S. E. Josephi, living at the corner of Twelfth and N streets, asking whether it could be located from his house. It seemed about a half mile southeast, and was evidently a small building. Of course, the doctor must have felt pleased at getting up, and the thanks and the apology of the reporter are hereby tendered. Perhaps the genial physician felt grateful that it was not a call to attend a patient two or three miles away, and that he didn't have to cross the river during the rain in a small boat.

The P. & K. Branch.—A dispatch was received here yesterday from Tacoma stating that the first passenger train over the Kalama branch would leave Tacoma Saturday night and that a train would leave here Sunday at 11:15 P. M. The opening of the road has been postponed so often it is hard to say whether this will be the inauguration of the passenger service.

MECHANICS' FAIR.

Interesting Exhibits of the Products of the Country.

Important Features of the Exhibition Worthy of Mention—Suggested Possibilities of the State's Development.

The most interesting and valuable exhibits at the Mechanics' Fair are those which present to the eye of the visitor the various industries and resources of this part of the country. The other things which may be seen in "the bazaar of all nations" have their appropriate place, and also their proper share of attention. While the representations that are peculiar to this region are not large in quantity, their variety is large, their quality is excellent, and they are very effectively displayed. The various samples of fruit, grain, vegetables, grasses, butter and cheese, dried fruits and jellies, canned fruits, wool and woolen goods, specimens of timber and minerals make such an exhibit as any state might be proud of, and show that this region has all the capabilities of production necessary to make a self-sustaining and rich commonwealth. The samples of dried fruit would attract favorable notice in Park & Tilford's store in New York city, and create a demand for these productions in the best markets. The fruit picked from trees that were brought across the plains in 1847 recalls the interesting story of "the traveling nursery," and shows that the trees lost nothing from being transplanted from the valley of the Mississippi to the valley of the Willamette. The specimens of wheat are remarkably fine, but Oregon wheat is always so good that its reputation may be considered established. The most remarkable thing about it is that the soil, unlike most others, seems to lose nothing of its marvelous productiveness after more than thirty years' cultivation. There are only a few specimens of corn, but a few stalks of Canada corn, with "full corn in the ear," hard and yellow and sound as a nut, are sufficient to show that there is no reason why the people of this city should buy meal for use at the breakfast table in California and Illinois. This is the kind of corn that the farmers of New England and New York think of on Thanksgiving day, when they go into details in enumerating the blessings of the year. It is one of the staple crops in Vermont and Maine, and if those cold states can make its production profitable, as they do, it ought to be raised in sufficient quantities here. The different kinds of manufactured articles, such as furniture, pottery, carriages, etc., are also highly creditable to the country, so far as they go, but they fall very far short of its capabilities and suggest possibilities of development rather than actual attainment in this direction. These products of the country are all interesting objects of study, and while they may be regarded with much satisfaction, they should also stimulate greater activity and enterprise among our people in their efforts to realize the fair and abundant possibilities of our climate and soil, and fulfill the various endowments of the state.

SPECIAL EXHIBITS.

Wilzinski Brothers, the extensive and well known cigar manufacturers of Front street, exhibit some beautiful specimens of domestic cigars, also a complete assortment of natural leaves of the tobacco plant tastefully arranged on cardboard. Connoisseurs say that Wilzinski's brands are superior to any cigars that are called imported, and sold for double the price.

THE BOUQUET.

One of the most unique exhibits in the fair is a gigantic bouquet surrounded by French millinery. It calls attention to the store of the ... on Third street, between Oak and Pine, and the ladies who conceived the idea are to be congratulated on their success.

EXHIBIT OF JEWELRY.

Henrichsen & Greenberg, the popular jewelers of First street, have a handsome stand tastefully fitted up, in which they have a rare and costly display of silverware, clocks and goods in their line. They keep one of the largest and most valuable stocks in the city of watches, diamonds and jewelry of the most modern patterns. Their store is well worthy of a visit.

GOLDEN RULE BAZAR.

Cohen, Davis & Co., of The Golden Rule Bazar, exhibit a fine line of dolls. One bears a ticket, "I am a China head that American ideas," another, "This is leap year. Will you have me?" another, "You can't mash us, we are indestructible." A very beautiful leather doll bears this inscription: "I don't speak English. I'm a French kid," another, "I am utterly too too." They have some beautiful dolls' buggies also, and lots of other articles to please the little folks. Their stand is near the entrance.

AGRICULTURAL GOODS.

Messrs. Osborne & Co., the well known manufacturers of agricultural implements of Front street, show samples of their specialties—a Thomas 5 rear-cut hay cutter, No. 8 reaper and No. 14 self-binding harvester. There are special points about the hay cutter, to which attention will be called hereafter. Suffice it to say that the goods manufactured by this house stand pre-eminent in their line, and are known and appreciated by our farmers beyond all comparison with any other makers in the several trials with whom they have always come out ahead.

CARD.

Read what a San Francisco lady says about Dr. Henley's Celery, Beef and Iron: "For two years I have been suffering from serious nervous trouble, accompanied with pain and palpitation of the heart, headache, indigestion, loss of appetite, sleeplessness and fearful spells, which my family and friends thought would prove fatal. To alleviate my sufferings I took chloral, laudanum, by the pound ... Most of the time I was unable to lie down, and was not able to get about the house. My physicians ... and three could find no remedy to relieve me. When my case seemed desperate, my son brought me a bottle of Dr. Henley's Celery, Beef and Iron, which I reluctantly consented to try. I was at once benefited, and three bottles have given me a new lease of life and health. I am now able to walk anywhere, and have gained more than twenty pounds in weight. It gives me great pleasure to certify to the great relief this valuable remedy has given me, and I cordially recommend it to those similarly afflicted." MRS. C. G. AUSTIN, 8 Folsom avenue, between 7th and 8th sts.

A Rare Opportunity.

Dr. Little, the celebrated specialist of San Francisco, will remain in Portland but a few days longer. The doctor is a thoroughly educated medical gentleman, and is known all over the Pacific coast as having performed remarkable cures in his line of practice. This will be a rare opportunity to consult the great specialist right in our own midst. See advertisement on Sixth page.

CENTENNIAL IN MINIATURE.

The Sixth Annual Exhibition of the Portland Mechanics' Fair.

THE OPENING NIGHT

An Exposition Reflecting the Greatest Credit Upon Managers and Exhibitors

A whir with machinery crowded from end to end with a display of almost every department of municipal industry splendid specimens of our unmatched soil, and showing a variety and perfection of art work that would do credit to any city, the pavilion seems like a centennial in miniature As a whole, or in detail, the Mechanics' fair is a splendid effort; nothing finer, more appropriate or complete in its way was ever accomplished by a city of 30,000 people It is not an exaggeration to say that the visitors pathway through the exposition is a rosary of beautiful things gemming it on every side Here a

PALPITATING NERVE

Of mechanical vitality, throbbing out the sentence "Tools and man" in front, in the galleries, here, there, everywhere, exhibitions of man's skill and ingenuity, a thousand and one evidences of man's conquests.

This was a part of the picture a few moments past 7 P M. Thursday evening, when Superintendent E. W Allen, upon whose shoulders have fallen, and been efficiently borne, the chief burdens of the exposition, said,

"LET THERE BE LIGHT"

And instantly there flamed out from hundreds of gas jets and nearly a score of electric lights, a royal blaze, magnificently illuminating every part of the interior of the vast structure, bringing into strong vivid contrast the rich and varied colors of the artistic decorations of the building and booths, making a brilliant and effective sight With the light, came choice and appropriate music from the Fourteenth infantry band, and exclamations of delight and enthusiasm from quite a throng of people present at the opening

As always happens, some exhibitors failed to appreciate the importance of being promptly on hand, thus losing the advantage of having their display seen by the earliest visitors, but nearly every department of the exposition is in good order and the attractions are so varied and interesting that the greatest credit is reflected upon both managers and exhibitors If there has been any delay in the finishing touches to the whole exhibition, it is due to the extent and complicated nature of the work There are many new and novel features never before shown at the Mechanics' fair, and on the whole the exhibition is greatly enhanced in variety and worth, as well as extent. All the available space of the immense building has been taken and so great was the pressure towards the last that the space alloted early in the season had to be circumscribed

Of course there are thousands of persons who could engineer, manage or superintend an exhibition like this as

EASY AS ROLLING OFF A LOG

Just as they could manage a newspaper or a war but sensible appreciative people will understand that it is no small task to meet or please hundreds of exhibitors, attend to all the details of inaugurating such an exposition, and to fill such a vast building with finery, show goods and machinery, all arranged to challenge the criticism of experts and even chronic growlers It has required not only the proverbial patience of Job and the executive talent of a Prescott, but the sharpest kind of work, to place things in smooth running order But it has been accomplished, and the board of directors, and especially Superintendent Allen, merit the utmost praise for the work The fair is an accomplished fact, and throngs of people are viewing it with approval and delight. A deep

MUNICIPAL FEELING

Has taken pride in the Mechanics' fair this year, as is evidenced by the exhibitions which reflect it, and which are on a scale commensurate with the trade interests represented. These exhibitions include the leading merchants and manufacturers of Portland, and a large number of these interests from other portions of Oregon, and a few from Washington territory Indeed there are so many exhibits, no matter what the taste, it can be gratified The manufacturing interest of this city is very fully represented, and a study of it and a comparison with what was exhibited last or the preceding years of the fair, shows a progressiveness for this city which few suspicioned To those who appreciate and reflect on such improvements in the mechanical arts and sciences, this pavilion is a place of special interest It presents a rare opportunity for studying the styles and novelties in all branches of our municipal industry Doubtless a great many cities of our size can make a more striking collective exhibition of varied manufactures, but that made at the pavilion is certainly very creditable and shows that our manufacturers and business men are neither faithless to themselves nor to the best interests of the state The character of the exhibitions and exhibitors makes it very [illegible] that the Mechanics' fair has come to be regarded as

NO ORDINARY EVENT,

That it is superior to the average show of this kind It is an institution established for a specific purpose—that purpose to make it commensurate with the metropolitan character of our city, to exhibit Portland and Oregon wares and ideas, and to take through it a front rank in the advance toward new fields of profitable trade That it will redound to the credit of our city and state and awaken our people to new commercial activities, there can be no doubt. Even on the lowest basis of mere pecuniary advantage, the opportunity is one that can be neglected only at a serious cost.

The fair has been organized to benefit the commerce and general industry of this city and state and with its unmatched display it is a very complete and valuable exponent of our resources and possibilities Of the ethical and social advantages opened up by the Mechanics fair it is not necessary now to speak at any length It has become a vast industrial school for the dissemination of practical information and intelligence Necessarily, a large number of our people must depend upon certain kinds of information coming to them through books and papers which at best, is partial and incomplete At the fair, like ours, all this education is changed

AN INVENTION IS LIKE A SENTENCE

An author may fail to discover an error in it, while another detects it in an instant So among the vast concourse at the pavilion there are sure to be a few who will discover incompleteness and imperfections in machinery or fabric and upon whom the discovery acts like an inspiration The visible object gives shape to the thought and somewhere in the future it will bear precious fruit In this way our fair with its concrete objects becomes a ready educator We cannot afford to lose sight of this fact

In the department set apart for the exhibition of plants and flowers, there is that which is especially attractive Unusual care has been expended in creating floral surprises and devices The space allotted to this purpose shows many evidences of artistic work There are special features of the beautiful and fantastic in the floral art in this department, to which we shall refer more in detail during the progress of the fair

ONE OF THE STRIKING FEATURES

Of the fair is the number of electric lights It cannot be denied that the illumination is very brilliant, and that the blaze is a very searching one Thereby hangs a tale—the ladies do not fancy it. They tell us—and we have the proof before us as we write—it makes spectral faces. Very few complexions can stand the test of an electric light of 1000 candle power or even less strength and brilliancy We are told that the sensation of color is subjective and we have found out this to a person like a newspaper man with normal eyes a rosy complexion appears ghostly if not positively ghostly under an electric light A powdered face is actually terrifying According to the law of complementary colors, a dead black under an electric light becomes a nut brown color This demonstrates that to appear a conventional brunette, it will be necessary to assume the darkey hue A slightly purple complexion under a 1000 candle power electric light, looks as yellow as saffron Light green gives out an extremely charming flesh tint chrome yellow imparts a whiteness to the skin. The ladies who attend the fair will have to make the following deductions A combination of pale sea green and chrome yellow produces the red and white complexion of which the poets raved

My love is like the red red rose
Like the red red rose is she

Paint the cheeks and lips green and the rest of the face yellow, and although you may in sunlight look like a section of the "bow of promise," when the electric lights beam on you, there will be the complexion of a Hebe.

If at any one point more than another, the attention of the average visitor is attracted, it is to

THE ART GALLERY

Where, under the rosy glow of well-arranged lights, will be found paintings and statuary representing nearly a hundred thousand dollars. The fact to be specially noted in this connection, is the generous public spirit that has opened private drawing-rooms, parlors and public galleries to the committee, in this way contributing largely to the success of the fair, and offering a rare and highly appreciated opportunity for the study of art. It is indeed an admirable collection of canvass work, over which the connoisseur may well linger and will reluctantly leave, and which at the same time will hold the masses in wondering admiration and may lead them to the dawning of wisdom Probably few will enter the art gallery and not find something to delight and instruct them in the collection of art trophies, this illustration of generosity of purpose and genuineness of method Over in

MACHINERY HALL

The visitor will find that, through which it is particular work is greatly relieved The display of machinery will no doubt make many a conquest during the three weeks' exhibition All the vast interests of life have a

THOUGHT SIDE

As well as a practical side, and in machinery hall, the sensitive intellect of the people will quickly respond to the subtle suggestions of the object lessons therein set And we are tempted to give here a text for the think-shops of the visitors in an extract from an oration delivered by Rev Robert Mackenzie at the 83 opening of the San Francisco Mechanics' Institute Elegant in diction, sense expressed in quick, sharp form, the address is well worth the reading

* * "I take issue there and claim that mechanics form a field in which a man may find a path that leads to equal glory with the proud academician

I Mechanics develop the thinking faculties I have a carpenter's bench near my study, to which I go when weary of theology or history, not for mental rest, but recreation, not for the cessation of thought, but for a change of thought. I find that at that bench it requires as much accurate and intense thought to miter a molding for an octagon or pentagon, as it does to find the five or eight leading thoughts in a text. I find that it requires the same logical acumen to put an intricate piece of machinery, as it does to array my material into the form of an essay or a sermon I grant you there are drudges at the bench that only carry out other men's thoughts, and perhaps we might find equal drudges at the student's desk But some one had to think, and when a steam engine or a sewing machine is put up complete and ready for work, it is as great a triumph of human intellect as an Iliad or a Paradise Lost. The new Brooklyn bridge, the latest triumph of mechanics, is a greater trophy of human intellect than an oration from Daniel Webster or a new volume of history from Bancroft Moreover, the men who toil in the confessed field of intellect wait for the skill of the mechanic The discovery of a star, the combinations of chemistry, the revelation of microscopy, all depend upon the deftness of some mechanic's hand and the genius of his brain And the discoveries thus made are immediately seized by the mechanical spirit and turned into usefulness and profit for the world There is not an ascertained fact in science, or discovery in geography or chemistry, or combination in art that is not woven by our mechanics into the fabrics exhibited in the pavilion * * * *

Over against the great intellect mechanics can place a hundred men who forgot to eat or sleep, who sat all oblivious to the surrounding circumstances, pursuing by intellect some new invention or

IMPROVEMENT IN MECHANICS.

They develope the imagination As you examine the implements of industry or the conveniences for home life in the fair you will see that the study of inventors and manufacturers has been not only to make a thing strong and useful but also to make it beautiful, All through that exhibition you will see the fruits of intelligence glorified by taste and imagination The Greeks thought it a pity that any one should die not having seen the statue of Jupiter Olympus I think, however, that you will search all galleries in vain for anything more beautiful and majestic in its beauty than a fast train sweeping around a curve, or a suspension bridge

OUR DAY SEES MECHANICAL SKILL

Striving to unite these several qualities, usefulness and beauty And has it not succeeded? The very carpets on your floors, the new papers on your wall, the furniture in your rooms are models of usefulness and museums of art. You have but to look at any of our merchants' first class wares in the fair to see that the mechanic has had a wide field and a deep inspiration for his imagination It develops wealth The ancient Jews had a wise proverb applied to all labor "It is gold at bottom" Gold once followed only the sword. Those were days when men carved out their fortune Days when the good old rule, the simple plan, "Let him take who has the power and keep who can," obtained among men Much gold is no longer discovered by the sword. Commerce, buying and selling, was the next rule that produced fortunes It made our merchant princes of the world's larger cities That mine is still productive Mechanics have opened another shaft to wealth, and among the millionaires of to-day are men who have reached their wealth by the invention or manufacture of machinery There are mechanics commanding larger salaries to-day than are paid to the average man in the three professions

At last the mechanic has lifted himself by lifting his work into prominence He can now reach the top of manhood, not by passing to another sphere, but by excellence in his own There are heights there from which he can look into the face of the poet and scientist on a level, with their own Hugh Miller could not reach fame, not only as a geologist but as a mason."

Owing to the unusual depression in business, there was expressed

SOME APPREHENSION

As to whether the ticket seller and ticket takers would have steady employment The fact that both of these courteous gentlemen Messrs Hagan and Goldsmith, were kept very busy last evening, and that the sale of season tickets has been exceptionally large, dissipates the fears alluded to and makes it tolerably certain that the attendance both on the part of our citizens and those from distant and near points in the state, will be highly satisfactory, such certainly is the promise to-day Some of this result is due to the managers of the different railway lines converging here, who have most cordially entered into co-operation with the directors of the fair, and offering a material reduction to the traveling public Under this arrangement the number of visitors from the surrounding country will no doubt increase steadily and it is safe to predict that the enthusiasm which characterizes the opening of our Mechanics' fair will extend and the undertaking prove, not only profitable and pleasant to the

RIGHT SHOWS,

But a remunerative one to the exhibitors, who have expended much time and money in placing before the people such splendid attractions, as well as tend to the establishment of new, and the enlargement of already established industries, both in the city and state

Some one has said that nowhere in all the rosy circuit of the hours is woman's power so resistless as in our own fair land that the American woman stands peerless among all the daughters of men Every man will subscribe to the toast, and every visitor to the pavilion will further asseverate that when the American woman applies her ingenuity, her taste for color and combination and her deftness of fingers to a

CRAZY QUILT

She stands unrivalled The same may be said of her other exhibitions of handiwork, as we see it at our fairs but it is especially true of the crazy quilt We are not surprised that great throngs gather about the railing behind which hangs really marvellous illustrations of the mania on that score, upon whose vision has burst for the first time this wonderful work, should stand with suspended breath, and withal so silent that one can hear a napkin ring What with silk and velvet of every conceivable shade and color thrown together hap-hazard, a fantastic jumble of the so much prized and fanciful etchings of the

KATE GREENAWAY

School, novel, grotesque or really fine illustrations of the art of hand painting, to say nothing of the Kensington, Eastlake or the almost countless designs, these novelties are fairly bewitching Especially is this so when we remember the supernatural struggle to invent new stitches for putting the blocks together, the prayers and beseechings for new pieces of silk or velvet, the lying awake of nights to concoct some new scheme for wheedling friends out of these materials, the long, deep, and exhaustive search and reconnoitre in old trunks and stowaways for relics of

YE OLDEN TYME

Wedding days, the guerilla warfare between opposing and jealous quilt makers, the fibs and prevarications, and the worry and fret, the tears and sobs, and patience and toil, the filchings and samplings, ere it is complete, and the fair owner with a sigh delivers it to the gaze of the public. Glad, too, is the husband, who has delightful visions of buttons sewed on, socks darned and those amazing hot dinners he so much prized before that crazy quilt came in to outlodge his comfort, and reduce his menu to cold potatoes and muddy coffee. Perhaps there is intrinsic beauty and harmony concealed somewhere in this thing, but on the surface the law of chaos reigns supreme. The whole thing reminds one of some of the new towns springing up in the Pacific northwest, there is a jumble of bay-windowed houses and wood yards, sanctuaries and saloons, and on Sunday morning the stranger watching the throng of people, is puzzled to know whether their objective is genealogy or theology. Your

HABITUAL SMOKER,

Who has so often enjoyed that delightful rest that kind of conscious sleep induced by a choice cigar, and from which he wakes refreshed, will linger long at the booth of that well and favorably known firm Wilzinski Bros & Co 115 Front street, wholesale dealers in cigars The firm make a splendid showing of their choice and popular brands of cigars, all nicely encased and arranged They show also the finer domestic and foreign tobaccos in leaf and in frozen or so samples, from the monster wrapper of Connecticut to the small but rich-flavored leaf of Sumatra. These gentlemen are among the largest dealers in cigars on the Pacific coast, and no matter what the taste, or purse capacity, smokers can be suited in the line of goods.

It would be gratifying to the representatives of the press, if he could find the space here for an hour's work in describing the examples of

DRAWING

As exhibited by the pupils of our public schools It would be very pleasant to give the name of each pupil and to each a word of praise We can only say at this time, that the exhibition makes an ensemble of work, manifesting a method, a regular system, and reflects the highest praise upon all who have furnished examples of their work. Many of these performances are ambitious. The aim of the superintendent of our public schools as well as that of the teacher is to make this branch, drawing on scientific methods, real work, and not mere recreation, or trifling with the pencil Educators, we are glad to say, have come to regard drawing as an important element in mental and bodily training Whether we touch the question of artistic feeling in the higher sense, drawing so far as concerns the practical handling of the pencil, the power of copying an object, and drawing in perspective, ought to be a part of every man's education In our schools drawing, which holds the same place in industrial as reading does in intellectual education, should be efficiently taught.

The exhibition in the

AGRICULTURAL

Department is especially noteworthy Not more for its amplitude and the splendid varieties of growth than the admirable manner in which these products have been arranged by C E Du Bois, assisted by L W Morgan Mr. Du Bois has expended much care and no small degree of artistic skill in this work, and he merits great praise for it.

The gifts of the orchard and the vine are especially fine, and will be one of the strong attractions of the fair These and the great number of other products displayed here are the tangible proofs of the prolific character of Oregon soil The grain exhibit of George Belshaw of Lane county deserves the whole tenor of the adjective magnificent. It is intended for exhibition at the New Orleans exposition, and it will give Oregon a greater reputation as a grain producing state than she could obtain from a ton of written descriptions Alongside of this is a splendid showing of grasses made by M Wilkins of Lane county

That well known, always popular, efficient and enthusiastic collector and exhibitor of all kinds of agricultural products, and especially the gifts of the orchard D. H. Prettyman, comes into prominence on the south side of the hall with 180 specimens of fruit that which will bear out the boast that for apples, pears, peaches, and the lesser varieties, Oregon is the peer of any state in the union H W Prettyman makes a fine showing of fruit, vegetables and trees He exhibits a few Japanese persimmons, making a visible comparison with this fruit as raised in Ohio and New York The Oregon fruit is about four times as large as its eastern companion

DOUBTLESS

A great many people will be incredulous about the statement that cream can be separated from milk in ten minutes after the cow lets go of it, and that in twenty more the cream appears on the table in half pound blocks of gilt-edged butter, but Mr E D Pierce, of Cowlitz dairy, near Freeport, W T, is on hand to demonstrate the assertion He performs it by the De Laval process Monsieur De Laval will have the blessings of thousands of farmers' wives who have lost their patience and temper waiting for that "pesky cream" to float to the surface and get ready for the churning Perhaps in this way too, we eaters will escape the Samson-like butter so common in these days

THE CAPITAL MILLS

Make an exhibit of sacked flour that is likely to attract universal attention. Mr Alexander Grant, who has charge, has crowned a pyramid of fruit and vegetables with a mammoth sack of this justly celebrated flour Within this sack, which is three feet wide and five feet high, there is bread food for the winter for almost any family in the city It is possible that it will be a gift to some poor and deserving household when the fair is over The exhibit of

VEGETABLES

Is from different parts of the valley and embraces quite all of the varieties of potatoes, turnips, onions, beets, cabbages, sweet potatoes From the farm of W. S. Ladd on Bachelor's island, Clark county, W T, comes a splendid showing of vegetables for winter feeding of stock, as well as a few specimens for table use Clackamas county exhibits through Judge Randall and Captain Apperson [illegible] Meyers of North Yamhill makes an excellent showing of vegetables H H Northup of Portland, exhibits some of the finest potatoes in the hall A splendid pyramid of cheese comes from Sauvies island dairy It was made for Messrs Abrams and Knox, by P N Talbot

A novelty is a collection of chestnuts grown by Cyrus Buckman of East Portland He shows some splendid varieties of the quince Samples of wool come principally from Van Houten Bros & Co of the Rimrock stock farm, Crook county A huge watermelon, that holds out a perpetual invitation to the thirsty visitor, attracts much attention It was sent from Sardine creek, Jackson county by J H Mills, as a gift to H Andrews, the treasurer of the O & C R R It is not a sale Miss M A Cox and Mrs Webb contributed a choice lot of home made jellies

THE SPICES

And perhaps smallest sign in this department, is made of red peppers, and spells out the words "Northern Pacific Cannery" Shannon, Bloomer & Co, who make a fine showing of preserves, fruits and vegetables The display of fruits is, by far, the most attractive ever made at the Mechanics fair In size, color flavor and general appearance, they cannot be excelled It is the concurrently expressed opinion that, in all respects, the agricultural department greatly excels any effort heretofore made At the fair

NEWSPAPER MEN

As well as others, are thrown into contact with the many officials and employes of the superintendent, and it is pleasant to be able to say here that Mr Allen has been fortunate in his selections His subordinates are courteous and accommodating This is especially true of those employed in the office of the superintendent Messrs Steel Cardwell and Heath, and ticket takers J T Williams and Charles Farleman of the New Market theatre The

FOURTEENTH INFANTRY BAND

Of twenty pieces met with a cordial reception last evening at the hands of the general public The program offered was an excellent one and exceptionally well rendered throughout The concerts of this band are likely to prove really rare musical treats during the continuance of the fair

Whether we refer to the taste displayed in the equipment of the booth, the goods exhibited, or both, there is no more attractive place than that over which is placed the sign "Heilshorn & Greenberg, the Oregon Jewelry Manufacturing Company 140 First street" The exhibit of solid silver ware and celebrated French clocks, made by this well-known and popular firm, is exceptionally fine These gentlemen make a specialty of these French goods, and carry a very large stock, embracing the latest and most unique styles In the line of watches, diamonds and goods of that class they are among the heaviest dealers on this coast

YOUTHFUL EXHIBITORS

Among the noticeable things at the fair this year, is the large number of really youthful exhibitors In the agricultural department, the young people have on display a variety of fruit and vegetables The feature is a pleasant one and full of promise for the state

ARTIFICIAL STONE WORKS

Near the center floor of the main hall not far from the pavilion office of THE TELEGRAM, there is an exhibition of rare interest made by that inventive genius, W. A. Muddleston He is the man who has been putting down those enduring and solid sidewalks that soon become as hard as a rock and grows harder every year The exhibit embraces a surprising variety of his work, such as stone sewer pipe, mosaic work, store pavement, curbing, monuments, drain pipes, etc This being entirely made up of the work of one of our own energetic citizens is a matter in which every Portlander will take special pride A man who can transmute our common sand into solid rock is a public benefactor of no small merit.

THE SWEETS OF THE FAIR.

Our handsome young man says this means the fair ladies, but when they are appealed to they say that C G Staples, the Morrison street candy man, has the sweetest booths in the whole building He manufactures his candy at his booth near the archway at the south east corner of the main floor, but has his grand stand in the arched pavilion under the band floor and another booth at the head of the southwest stairway

BRITISH LORDS.

John Bright Describes the House of Lords.

In the course of his recent speech in Birmingham, where his friends think the great orator equaled even his former efforts, John Bright said

Now would you allow me to put a question or two to you, and, in some sort, to myself? I should like to ask you who or what are these peers who take upon themselves this authority? [Cries of "Nothing!"] To look at them as they are entering the house or leaving the house you would observe that they are very much like other men [Loud laughter We know that the bulk of them are not those accustomed to business, and we believe that we feel that they have less sympathy than other men with their fellow countrymen [Cheers Now, in some respects they are peculiar ["dear, hear" and laughter] and the great bulk of the people would say that in some respects they are greatly to be envied For example, the members of the house of peers—the 600 persons or families—are reported to be the owners of one-fifth the whole of the land in the United Kingdom ["Shame"]

I do not in the least object to any man owning an estate which he has honestly come by I would not deprive land owner, or manufacturer, or merchant, or shopkeeper or laborer of anything that is his, and I am not calling in question the legality of the ownership of all this land by the 600 peers or peers' families, whose claims we are now discussing. But, besides this, I see it is reported that the 600 peers are possessors of not less—I believe considerably more—than 4000 livings of the Church of England ["Shame."] If this be so, then it follows that the house of peers among them can appoint, and do appoint in the main, several thousand teachers of the people in what are to be considered the highest things Besides this, the house of lords, or members of that house for the most part, are lord lieutenants of counties In that office they appoint almost all the county magistrates The county magistrates administer justice wisely [laughter Well, they profess to do it [laughter], and, with some exceptions, we may believe that they honestly, in the main, endeavor to perform their duty

Beyond this again the members of the house of lords, the great land owners, as you know, exercise a very powerful control over the county representation There are counties in which the whole representation, without fear of contest, will be found to be in the hands of two or three or four members of the house of lords. ["Shame!"] They have yet another peculiarity which I thought not to omit to mention, in that as great owners of land they are liable to a very much lighter taxation—direct taxation—upon land than is the case with any other class of land owners in any European kingdom or in the United States of America. "Shame"] Now, I have spoken of the peers quite apart from the house of peers

But now we come to the question of their position in the house of lords, because that is what we now have to deal with ["Hear, hear"] We call them, as you know, the upper house—[laughter—and when a bill leaves the house of commons it has gone up to the house of lords, and if a bill comes from the house of lords it has gone down to the house of commons. [Laughter I do not know why that distinction is made but you will consider this fact—that the members of the house of lords do not enter that house in any degree from any personal merit that attaches to them ["Hear, hear"] It is not because they have performed any good or great deed that has recommended them to the favor of their fellow countrymen it is not by the choice of or by the approval of their fellowmen that they become members of the house of peers and legislators for a great nation It was once said in ages past—whether it was a dream or not I will not say—that the path to the temple of honor lay through the temple of virtue—["Hear, hear"]—but the law making peer, he never dreams that he is going to the temple of legislative honor thro' the temple of virtue [Laughter] But if he does not know, we all know that he goes into the temple of honor thro' the sepulcher of a dead ancestor [Laughter and loud cheers] I was struck the other day with a few words which I saw in one of the Psalms [illegible] times If you turn to the seventy-third Psalm you will find the words I am going to read Speaking of some very unpleasant and troublesome people in his day, the psalmist says "They are not in trouble as other men," [laughter] "neither are they plagued like other men" [Renewed laughter] "Therefore," he says, "pride compasseth them about as a chain they speak wickedly concerning oppression they speak loftily" [Laughter and great cheering] It becomes you to consider this fact, that every bill which becomes an act or a law in this country must pass through their hands and depend upon their vote ["Hear, hear"]

The additions to the house of lords only make it more powerful and more numerous, but I have never found that they make it more liberal ["Hear, hear" Listen to this fact. During the last three years there have been fifty new members enter the house of lords not by creation—a few of them only by creation In the bulk by succession to their fathers ["Shame"] But when they go in they do as their fathers did (A voice "Worse, worse"] Some of them so much worse than their fathers

Hear, hear] The fact is that the [illegible] remains unchanged that the house of the peers unchanged There is no power under heaven that can change them, and it rests with our countrymen [Loud cheers] The fact is that privilege everywhere tends to beget ignorance and selfishness and arrogance ["Hear, hear"]. In the house of commons coming from the people there is always a growing sense that liberty and justice are necessary for a free people ["Hear, hear"] In the house of peers, as they have come from their fathers, and not from their country they are less disposed to act than the commons I will ask you what would have become of this country if the lords, the majority of the lords, had ruled unchecked for the last fifty years (A voice "A revolution") By this time the country would have been enslaved or ruined, or a revolution would have swept them away ["Hear, hear"] it might possibly have swept away even the venerable monarchy itself

THE BUFFALO DYING OUT.

The Catch for the Season Showing a Strange Falling Off

ST PAUL Oct 2—A curious feature of a once important branch of trade in this city is the fact that the entire "catch" of buffalo robes this year is but four. Last year the catch was 10,000 robes In 1881, the year after the Northern Pacific was opened through to the Little Missouri, northwestern traders got in about 100,000 robes The railway [illegible] in the hide-hunters and as the buffalo happened to be south of the line and within reaching distance of the Missouri and transportation, the output was very large Thousands upon thousands were killed whose hides were never removed and of the thousands a large majority furnished only a few pounds of tenderloin to the [illegible] hunters There was talk for years about the time when the buffalo would be practically extinct Now that time has come and it is too late for protective laws Such laws could not have been enforced against the Indians, but they might have been against the white hide hunters and the rich sportsmen, who were the most wanton death dealers of the lot. The buffalo have disappeared from the [illegible] of Dakota and Montana, and from all other parts of the northwest as well The remnants of the big band, numbering probably a few thousand, are somewhere north of the international line—no one seems to know clearly where, but practically in the remote vicinity of Wood mountain There are a few on the upper Moreau, and still fewer on the plains between the James river and the Missouri, and about the 46th parallel An old bull was recently driven into Fort Abercrombie along with a lot of domestic cattle by the cowboys He looked as the last of his race, and if he has any fellows they can't be found The buffalo can be crossed on domestic cattle, but the hybrid, while good enough for meat, is not of much use for robes It is regarded as a pity that there was not a law enforced ten years ago making it a penal offense for a white man to slaughter buffalo so recklessly The Indians are not ruthless in their destruction, as has been claimed, and, besides when they get a robe and tan it it is worth something The robes tanned by whites are incomparably inferior to those known to the trade as Indian tanned The [illegible] a lot of pain and seem to have a method which, while it makes the hide pliable leaves it of sufficient thickness and strength to hold the hair and withstand the rough usage all robes must undergo,

What "Old Fritz" Said

It was an aphorism of Frederick the Great's that "Facts are divine things." An undisputed fact is that Dr Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is the most powerful liver vitalizer extant and by its characteristic and searching action will cure dyspepsia, constipation, dropsy, kidney disease, sick headache and other maladies which popular opinion to the contrary notwithstanding are directly traceable to a diseased condition of the liver, by which its work as purifier of the blood is made incomplete All druggists.

EUGENE NOTES.

EUGENE, Oct. 10.

Mrs. Bond, who was so severely hurt near Irving last week, seems to be slowly recovering.

The republicans will "moresh" next Monday evening on the occasion of Senator Dolph's speech.

Willamette street is receiving a new sidewalk along the West side. It is being graded to a perfect level from the depot to Ninth street.

Hon. M. C. George spoke here yesterday afternoon. The house was well filled, and the attention which he audience gave him showed that his remarks were appreciated.

Yesterday morning Mr. Porks, according to contract began framing the wooden building for a kitchen at the rear of the new hotel, but was informed by the city authorities that that was within the fire limit.

The remains of Grandfather ... were interred yesterday without an inquest. He was lying about on one side of a log which lay about three feet from the ground, and his ax and cane were on the other. His face was somewhat bruised, and it is supposed he fell from the log, receiving a ... from which he did not recover.

HUNT'S REMEDY CO.,
Providence, R. I.

LYDIA E. PINKHAM'S VEGETABLE COMPOUND

IS A POSITIVE CURE

For all of these Painful Complaints and Weaknesses so common to our best FEMALE POPULATION.

IT WILL CURE ENTIRELY THE WORST FORM OF FEMALE COMPLAINTS, ALL OVARIAN TROUBLES, INFLAMMATION AND ULCERATION, FALLING AND DISPLACEMENTS, AND THE CONSEQUENT SPINAL WEAKNESS, AND IS PARTICULARLY ADAPTED TO THE CHANGE OF LIFE.

IT WILL DISSOLVE AND EXPEL TUMORS FROM THE UTERUS IN AN EARLY STAGE OF DEVELOPMENT. THE TENDENCY TO CANCEROUS HUMORS THERE IS CHECKED VERY SPEEDILY BY ITS USE.

IT REMOVES FAINTNESS, FLATULENCY, DESTROYS ALL CRAVING FOR STIMULANTS, AND RELIEVES WEAKNESS OF THE STOMACH. IT CURES BLOATING, HEADACHES, NERVOUS PROSTRATION, GENERAL DEBILITY, DEPRESSION AND INDIGESTION.

THAT FEELING OF BEARING DOWN, CAUSING PAIN, WEIGHT AND BACKACHE, IS ALWAYS PERMANENTLY CURED BY ITS USE.

IT WILL AT ALL TIMES AND UNDER ALL CIRCUMSTANCES ACT IN HARMONY WITH THE LAWS THAT GOVERN THE FEMALE SYSTEM.

ITS PURPOSE IS SOLELY FOR THE LEGITIMATE HEALING OF DISEASE AND THE RELIEF OF PAIN, AND THAT IT DOES ALL IT CLAIMS TO DO, THOUSANDS OF LADIES CAN GLADLY TESTIFY.

FOR THE CURE OF KIDNEY COMPLAINTS IN EITHER SEX THIS REMEDY IS UNSURPASSED.

A SKIN OF BEAUTY IS A JOY FOREVER.

DR. T. FELIX GOURAUD'S

ORIENTAL CREAM or Magical Beautifier

Purifies as well as Beautifies the Skin. No other cosmetic will do it.

Removes Pimples, Freckles, Tan, Moth Patches, Rash and Skin Diseases, and every blemish on Beauty, and defies detection. It has stood the test of 30 years, and is so harmless we taste it to be sure the preparation is properly made. Accept no counterfeit of similar name. The distinguished Dr. ... said to a lady of the haut ton (a patient): "As you ladies will use them, I recommend 'Gouraud's Cream' as the least harmful of all skin preparations." ... DR. PAUL M. GRENAN

IS THE MOST SUCCESSFUL PHYSICIAN ON the Pacific coast in the treatment of all Chronic and Difficult Diseases of the Sexual Organs.

He will guarantee to cure any form of disease of the generative organs or private disease if the patient follows his advice and treatment.

He has become an expert in the treatment of disease, weakness and derangement of the reproductive organs of both male and female, including diseases caused by the FOLLIES OF YOUTH, such as Spermatorrhoea, or Seminal Weakness, or Loss of Perfect Vitality. Nearly two-thirds of all the chronic diseases spring either directly or indirectly from some derangement of the sexual system, and yet this subject is neglected by a majority of the Medical Profession.

Persons afflicted by any form of sexual disease or weakness often delay in calling upon the proper physician in time from a sense of modesty and sometimes from ignorance and permit those diseases to exist until their constitution becomes corrupted, their organization broken down and the hope of future happiness blighted until death becomes a welcome messenger to carry them out of their miserable existence. Everything strictly confidential under all circumstances. Lost manhood perfectly restored.

Catarrh, Bronchitis, Throat Diseases, Skin Diseases, Rheumatism, Kidney Complaint and all diseases of the Eye and Ear, Stomach and Bladder, he can cure without fail if they are curable and if not, he will tell you so.

Consultation Free, and a list of printed questions sent to those living at a distance who cannot consult him personally. Enclose postage stamp for list.

Office—Nos. 14½ and 134 Third street, corner of Alder, opposite Masonic Hall.

THE LAW SCHOOL.

Introductory Lecture Delivered by Professor Thornton.

JUDGE DEADY'S OPENING ADDRESS

Inauguration of the Study of the Law as a part of the Curriculum of the University of Oregon

At half past 7 last evening the introductory lecture of the law school was delivered by Professor Thornton in the assembly room of the Business college in the Willamette block on the corner of Yamhill and Second streets. The lecturer was introduced and the school formally opened by Judge Deady, as president of the regents of the university of Oregon. In doing so he said substantially:

"Considering the number present on this interesting occasion, we may draw consolation from the juvenile verse which we all remember,

Great streams from little fountains flow,
Tall oaks from little acorns grow.

But the streams are larger and the oaks taller than they bid fair to be a few moments ago.

"It is now more than a century and a quarter ago since the father of modern common law commenced to teach the law of England as a science by means of lectures delivered at the university of Oxford. This was the beginning of academic teaching of the common law. Hitherto, it had been excluded from the universities, because it did not speak in the dead language of the civil law, and was confined to the Inn's of the courts.

"In 1758, the lecturer was chosen to the professorship of the common law at Oxford, then lately endowed by the will of Mr Viner, the author of the once celebrated Abridgement of the law. There in the next seven years he delivered those famous lectures on the common law, which were soon after given to the public in the work entitled, "Commentaries on the laws of England, by Sir William Blackstone." Few events have had more influence in moulding opinion and directing action in the United States than the publication of these lectures.

"In the years that have passed since the common laws were given to the world great changes have occurred in the civil polity and social condition of the English-speaking people throughout the world. But the fundamental principles and maxims of the common law are still their rule of action—their standard of right and measure of duty.

"And so we are met here to-night to inaugurate the study of this law with its local adaptations to this far-off shore as a part of the curriculum of the University of Oregon—the pride and hope of the state. In the ordinary affairs of mankind the law is the only measure of absolute right and duty, and those who are called to administer it—the bench and bar—are so far the keepers of the conscience of the country.

"True there is a higher authority than this to which an appeal is sometimes taken. It is called 'public opinion.' But 'public opinion' is the source of the common law. If it is wise and healthy it will in time crystalize and become the law of the land. But this 'public opinion' is often forced and ephemeral. It is often made by the press and then invoked to support its arbitrary fiat. The press has a high place in modern society, has great power and is generally of great use. We all live in a wholesome fear of it, even when we least respect it.

But as a court of judicature it is not a success. The difficulty is, it undertakes to combine the functions of judge, jury and advocate, and what is of more serious import, it may be privately retained by interested parties, and when not so is liable, as a matter of business, to volunteer on the side of the greatest noise or the most subscribers.

"So long, then, as we continue a civilized people with established rules of law and organized and responsible courts, the lawyers of the country will give the keynote of right and wrong in human affairs. Therefore it is very necessary that they should be fitly educated—trained not only in the mere art of the profession but in the science and ethics of the law.

"To aid in this good work the regents of the University of Oregon have established a law school, and appointed Mr Richard H. Thornton professor therein. The school has been located in Portland, because of the superior facilities found here in the lawyers' offices and the courts for learning the practice of the law.

As president of the regents it gives me great pleasure to be present on this interesting occasion, and to introduce to your favorable consideration Professor Thornton, who will now deliver the opening lecture of the course. Years hence, when many of us now present shall have passed away, and the young men—the hope of the country—who constitute the beginning of this school shall stand in the front rank of society, at the bar, on the bench and in the senate, it may be pleasant for you to remember this auspicious opening of the school where you took your first lessons in the science of the law."

Professor Thornton then read the following lecture:

Gentlemen of the Law School of the University of Oregon: It is with great pleasure that I welcome you to our opening session, and I trust that this department of the state university will so prosper by the joint efforts of lecturers and students, as to be of permanent utility, in the first place to the legal profession, and then indirectly to the community at large. The interests of that profession are so intimately connected with those of the public that nothing which substantially affects the one can be a matter of indifference to the other.

I have thought it suitable, on this our first meeting, to address to you some introductory and general remarks, rather than to commence with the first lecture of the regular course.

The functions of all government are essentially threefold. There must be a power to make the laws, a power to interpret and apply them, and a power to put them into visible and active effect. These powers are legislative, judicial and executive, and without them a government cannot exist. There are systems under which the monarch both makes and executes the law, and the judiciary is merely his creature and servant, assisting in the performance of his wishes. Such is the pattern of an autocracy, a form of government historically ancient and still prevalent in many lands. In certain other systems the form of an autocracy has been preserved while the substance has been modified. Thus we find in the world limited monarchies, of which the government of England is the most conspicuous example. In the American systems, there is a co-ordination of the three functions. He who makes the law is not to interpret the law, and neither he who makes it, nor he who interprets it, is to carry it into execution. The constitution of Oregon expresses this thought very clearly, in declaring that the powers of the government shall be divided into three separate departments, the legislative, the executive, including the administrative, and the judicial, and no person charged with official duties under one of these departments shall exercise any of the functions of another, except as in the constitution expressly provided. This balance of powers is theoretically exact, and almost, but not entirely, exact in practice. It was invented by the wisdom of the fathers of the American republic, for the perpetual conservation of free institutions. Thus the federal executive and the federal judiciary are co-ordinate with congress, and with each other, and so it is with the governor of a state, and its judiciary, and its legislative assembly. Descending to the municipal corporation, which is the lowest type of civil government, we find it generally framed on the same model, with a mayor for its president, select and common councils for its congress or parliament, and (in its complete development) with inferior magistrates for its judiciary.

As lawyers, we have to do chiefly with the legislative and judicial functions of government. And we find in the first place a great body of immemorial law which lies behind all known statutes, and the exact limits of which are not easily defined. Then we find statutes, and amendments of statutes. Lastly we find decisions, applying those statutes to particular exigencies, and accommodating them by comparison and construction, to the needs of the community. And we see many courts at the same time, adjudicating questions which are, to a large extent, common to them all. There are the English courts; there is the supreme court of the United States; there are the subordinate federal tribunals; there are the courts of the several states, and of one's own state or territory. At the present time these various judicatures are producing decisions at the rate of at least one hundred volumes of reports per year. Thus an immense mass of legal material is being accumulated, with which no living man can possibly familiarize himself in detail.

The question then arises: What is the best method of acquiring a good working knowledge of the law, such a knowledge as can be put to practical use when particular difficulties arise and advice is needed? Let us devote a brief examination to this matter.

Excluding those practitioners whose aspirations are bounded by the area of a justice's court, or who settle down contentedly to the work of a mere scribe or conveyancer, there are in the profession two kinds of lawyers. They are distinguished from each other by their mode of examining cases which are submitted to them. A lawyer of the one class, on ascertaining the facts of a case not exactly provided for by statute, rushes immediately to the digests of reports in order to see whether any case has ever been adjudicated, which is precisely similar to the one in hand, or, as we say, runs on all fours with it. If he finds such a case, favorable to his client's interest, he congratulates himself on his discovery. If he can find no such case, he is at his wits' end to come to a conclusion. Nor is this surprising, because he is like a mariner on a dark sea, without chart or compass. Now I am far from wishing to depreciate the value of adjudged decisions. Indeed, few things are more gratifying than to find a case, resting on good authority, which distinctly supports one's position. But the details of human affairs are so infinitely varied that one cannot always find a case exactly in point, and the decisions when they are clear and applicable, are not always harmonious. There is a more excellent way in this matter. A lawyer of the other and superior class does not in the first place go to any digest or volume of reports. He sits down and analyzes the case for himself. He determines in his own mind what principles it involves, and what rule ought to govern its decision. Then he examines the books, in order to see whether the courts have regarded the same matter in the same light, and whether his judgment is in accord with the collective wisdom of the past. And this is the true way to examine any legal question. It is the method of a scholar; the other is the method of a sciolist. Let me commend to your serious and constant attention one of the weightiest sayings of that great chief justice, Lord Mansfield: "The law does not consist of particular cases, but of general principles which are explained and illustrated by those cases." It is good to be familiar with cases; it is better to be conversant with principles.

How, then, is a competent knowledge of legal principles to be acquired? The mass of authority in which these principles are collected and expounded is already enormous, and is constantly increasing. And we have to deal with the old as well as the new. The study of ancient systems of jurisprudence is exceedingly inviting to a philosophical mind, and some of the greatest jurists, among whom were Mansfield and Kent and Story, unlocked for themselves the treasures of the civil law. It is by no means necessary that all students should follow these distinguished men in that region of arduous research, but every lawyer, who in any true sense deserves the name, must know the character of that ancient system upon which American law is ultimately based—the great common law of England. This you will learn chiefly in the pages of Blackstone. But even here there is undoubtedly a point beyond which a minute examination of the older law is undesirable, not as being in itself unworthy of attention, but because life is short, and the needs of practical business are pressing. We may as well meet this issue candidly. Antiquarian learning is both valuable and attractive, but, after all, we are living late in the nineteenth century. The student very properly wishes to be able to conduct a suit, not in the mode current under Edward the Third and Charles the Second, but as it is conducted under our modern rules. He desires to be wiser concerning attachments and liens than concerning escuages and heriots, and to know more about common carriers than about common recoveries. On the other hand, any one (let us say) who takes up the Oregon code, without a fair knowledge of the law as it existed and has existed outside of the code, will soon find himself in difficulties. Not only will he encounter an unknown phraseology, but he will find that what is latent must frequently be invoked in order to elucidate what is expressed, and that in many places legislation has only declared those common-law rules which the courts would have recognized without it.

So there must be in this regard, an avoiding of the too little, and of the too much, especially of the too little; a judicious steering, according to the classical myth, between Scylla and Charybdis. You must seek to know quite enough of the ancient law to enable you to understand what the modern law really means. You must learn to perceive the changes which time has produced, and the reasons which have made those changes desirable. Above all, you must become saturated with the principles and maxims of the law. These are in reality the essence of the whole matter. The adroit application of a maxim frequently solves a case which previously appeared doubtful. Some of the ablest judges of the supreme court of the United States have excelled conspicuously in this species of wisdom.

By gaining that knowledge of principles, which I commend to you, you will form in yourselves a logical and legal mind, one of the rarest and most enduring of all possessions; you will learn, in the language of Lord Ellenborough, to look at subjects with legal optics; you will be able to frame a rational analysis of a disputed problem, and to arrive at a correct judgment as the result of your analysis. Then you can take your places among the fraternity of the bar, with a modest confidence of serving your clients well, and securing for yourselves that respect which always attends intellectual eminence, and the emolument which is the due reward of diligent and honest work.

Many persons of distinction have questioned the utility of lectures as a mode of instruction. And it must be conceded, and should be clearly understood, that no one can effectually learn anything by attending lectures only. Many of us hear fifty or a hundred lectures from the pulpit every year, yet church goers, as a rule, are most indifferent theologians. The fact is, that no subject can be thoroughly learned without careful private study. Now schools of law are instituted exclusively for those who intend to bear their own share of the burden, not for any who suppose that there is a magical and painless process for transforming them into philosophers. Students who do not read with assiduity will derive little advantage from lectures and they will discover their deficiency, in being unable to answer the questions proposed to them; and finally, unless they come to a better mind, they will sustain a disappointment here at least in not receiving the diploma which rightfully belongs only to the diligent and capable. Those, on the other hand, who make a good use of all their opportunities, will find lectures valuable, in systematizing their investigations, in illustrating topics which are apt occasionally to be [illegible] dull, and in provoking that spirit of emulation which is a wholesome incentive to every human effort.

It should be remembered throughout, that the purpose of the law is to do justice between man and man. So much is this the case, that a person who is well grounded in legal principles, and has a delicate perception of equity, will decide correctly in nine cases out of ten, without ever consulting an authority. And those judicial decisions which fail to do justice are in fact bad law, and are generally doomed to a speedy or tardy overthrow. But here an important discrimination must be made. The law is said to be the perfection of human reason; yet the justice at which the law aims is not an absolute and infallible equity for each individual case, because, to attain that, would transcend mortal ingenuity. General rules must be laid down, such as are adapted to the ordinary course of mundane affairs. And general rules will inevitably work particular hardship in exceptional instances. Let us take one or two examples of this. It sometimes happens that a jury renders a wrong verdict. Yet in the majority of cases, and without some special and weighty reason, a wrong verdict may not be disturbed. Is not this a hardship to the unsuccessful litigant? In a popular sense, when such an accident occurs, justice has failed. But it would be much more inconvenient to invite a disturbance of verdicts generally, than to let them rest. Therefore, when the trial has been fair, and the jury have made an honest mistake concerning a doubtful matter, there is no remedy. The cause is adjudicated, once for all, and the door of litigation is shut. Again, a man may transgress the law in some respect through pure ignorance, yet he is not allowed to plead that ignorance as a defense, because, if this were permitted, every rogue in the country would seek to shelter himself under a similar plea, and criminal jurisprudence (to go no further) would become a byword. Yet again, it is a well-known rule that evidence of the intentions of a testator, as expressed by him orally, cannot be admitted to contradict or vary the terms of his will as expressed in writing. This rule may undoubtedly cause hardship. It is not difficult to imagine a case in which a testator has inadvertently failed to express his true meaning in the written document, and has expressed it abundantly and clearly and repeatedly in conversation. But it would be infinitely dangerous to admit evidence of his spoken words, because an invitation would at once be extended to fraud. Unscrupulous persons would continually commit perjury, in order to change testamentary dispositions. There is a common principle underlying these three instances. The private interest in case of a conflict must yield to the public good. Salus reipublicae suprema lex. Ad ea quae frequentius accidunt jura adaptantur. The laws are framed to meet cases of frequent, rather than of infrequent occurrence, and to conserve the general rather than the particular welfare.

This principle of the sacrifice of the individual to the common weal is a rule of permanent necessity, not a mere device of casual invention. The laws of nature are in a large sense beneficent, yet an accidental infraction of them uniformly brings its appointed consequence. Nor is there any respect of persons in the matter.

When the loose mountain trembles from on high,
Shall gravitation cease if you go by?
Or some old temple nodding to its fall,
For Chartres' head reserve the hanging wall?

And so it has been in those dealings with mankind which have been more immediately divine. The obligation of a general law has been maintained, even where a large share of misfortune was involved in the transgression. There is a striking example of this in the old testament. No one except a Levite, was permitted to touch the ark. But on a certain occasion Uzzah, who was not a Levite, put forth his hand to prevent the ark from falling. And he died because the Eternal had given them a law which should not be broken. In all these cases there is a large and mysterious analogy. The law, which is prudently ordained for the general welfare, and adapted to the usual course of affairs, must not be turned aside merely for the sake of one person. But an exception which frequently occurs will be remedied in our jurisprudence, not because of the hardness of one, but because of the frequency. Hard cases have often been said to make bad law, and it has been a characteristic fault of some weak judges that they have allowed sympathy to sway them overmuch, and have thus set erroneous precedents, which their wiser successors have reversed.

As it is the purpose of the law, so it should be the aim of the legal practitioner, to secure the ends of justice; not of any impossible and chimerical ideal, but of that justice which the law requires. The system of jurisprudence does not exist in the first instance as a contrivance for obtaining lucrative fees, though lucrative fees in important causes are a comforting incident of the system. The attorney owes a duty to the court, as well as to his client. He also owes a duty to the adverse attorney, and to the adverse client. He has no right to obtain for his own client an unconscionable or mean advantage, or to defeat any man's cause for lucre or malice. That attorney, who in a certain case deceived the court by inserting a false leaf in an almanac, has been sometimes commended for his smartness. But in fact he violated his professional oath, and deserved to be thrown over the bar. One can imagine the outburst of indignation which such a proceeding would have called forth from a Marshall, or a Shaw, or a Holt, or a Kenyon. And many transactions are less evidently scandalous than this, which are nevertheless repudiated by all men who have a fine sense of professional honor.

On the other hand it should be remembered that every man has a right to his day in court, and that even a criminal is not to be condemned upon insufficient evidence or unlawful procedure. Nor are those persons reasonable, who expect from the advocate the impartiality of the judge, or without due cause seek to affect the lawyer with the iniquity of his client. But we have to consider appearance, as well as substance. A reputation for integrity, as well as for ability is to be sought and prized, and an attorney who is habitually employed by evildoers cannot expect that his own character will long remain immaculate.

And now in conclusion. The study of the law demands continued and steady industry, an industry not always sufficiently exercised in such an age as ours, which is impatient of delay and clamorous for quick results. Some years ago, a member of the bar, practicing in Boston, mentioned to me a remark made in his presence by one of his preceptors. "You can't learn the law as you can learn grammar, or geography, or anything else; it has to soak in." The expression was somewhat homely, but it conveyed a true idea, which sank into the minds of those who heard it, and afterwards into my own. With diligent care, the law will 'soak in.' And it will be the endeavor of your lecturers to help it to 'soak in.' But this process must be gradual. It cannot be sudden. Nay, it will continue as long as the law is your profession, even to the end of your legal career; for we are all of us learners. And indeed not the law only, but every philosophical study, is inexhaustible. Sir Isaac Newton, when the catalogue of his discoveries was complete, declared that he felt like a child who had picked up a few pebbles on the shore of the ocean of truth. Michael Angelo, at the close of his long life, drew an emblem representing an old man harnessed to an infant's go-cart, with the motto, Ancora imparo, 'Still I am learning.' And so, if at times you feel disheartened at the immensity of the subject which you have undertaken to conquer, do not give way on that account. The feeling of despondency is one which we have all occasionally experienced. It is much better to be conscious of the immense complexity of legal problems, than flippantly to presume that any man can open a lawyer's office, as easily as start a small retail business. Those who measure a difficulty accurately, and regard it earnestly, are most likely to grapple with it successfully. Therefore, in periods of doubt or hesitation, let those words of our master Coke be your comfort: "Albeit the student shall not at any one day, do what he can, reach to the full meaning of all that is laid down in these books, yet let him no way discourage himself, but proceed; for on some other day, in some other place, or perhaps upon a second perusal of the same, his doubts will be probably removed."

An Efficient Remedy

In all cases of Bronchial and Pulmonary Affections is AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL. As such it is recognized and prescribed by the medical profession, and in many thousands of families, for the past forty years, it has been regarded as an invaluable household remedy. It is a preparation that only requires to be taken in very small quantities, and a few doses of it administered in the early stages of a cold or cough will effect a speedy cure, and may, very possibly, save life. There is no doubt whatever that

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral

Has preserved the lives of great numbers of persons, by arresting the development of Laryngitis, Bronchitis, Pneumonia, and Pulmonary Consumption, and by the cure of those dangerous maladies. It should be kept ready for use in every family where there are children, as it is a medicine far superior to all others in the treatment of Croup, the alleviation of Whooping Cough, and the cure of Colds and Influenza, ailments peculiarly incidental to childhood and youth. Promptitude in dealing with all diseases of this class is of the utmost importance. The loss of a single day may, in many cases, entail fatal consequences. Do not waste precious time in experimenting with medicines of doubtful efficacy, while the malady is constantly gaining a deeper hold, but take at once the speediest and most certain to cure,

THE ROYAL BAKING POWDER

The practical tests by innumerable housekeepers have established the fact that the Royal Baking Powder is always reliable, and never fails to make light, sweet, and palatable bread.

The thousands of tests by scientific bodies and eminent chemists in both hemispheres have so thoroughly and repeatedly demonstrated the absolute purity, superlative leavening power, and perfect wholesomeness of the Royal Baking Powder, that these facts are no longer questioned by any one.

Further tests to determine an equally important fact have recently been made by Government chemists Mott and Love; by Prof. McMurtrie, late Chief Chemist of the U. S. Agricultural Department; by Prof. Chandler, of the National Board of Health, and others. A Baking Powder may have a large amount of raising power when first made, but if it does not retain its strength until wanted for use it is worthless. It may raise the cake or biscuit when fresh, but its use when a few weeks old will produce heavy, sour, indigestible, unwholesome food.

The following table is compiled from the tests above alluded to, which were made to determine the difference in strength between various baking powders when fresh and when a few weeks old. As the housekeeper has no means of knowing when buying baking powder from the shelf of the grocer how long it has been made, these tests will be most valuable in protecting her from the multitude of baking powder swindles of the present day.

Name	Cubic inches of leavening gas per ounce of powder. When fresh.	When not fresh.

Bulk	[illegible]	[illegible]

This sample, from the shelf of a retail grocer, was over five years old. [illegible]

The remarkable fact apparent from the above is the perfect keeping quality of Royal Baking Powder, which it was found had lost but one-half of one per cent. of its strength (an inappreciable amount in baking) while all others had lost so much of their leavening gas as to be comparatively valueless.

This great superiority of Royal Baking Powder arises from the extraordinary care in its manufacture and the scientific principles employed in its combination. The articles used are thoroughly dried by heat before being compounded, and are so prepared and coated as to prevent the action of the acid upon the alkali prematurely, or except under the influence of both water and heat necessarily used in cooking or baking.

All the tests, both scientific and practical, place "Royal" at the head in every respect, the standard baking powder of the world.
